FINNISH FASCISTS REVOLT AND PLAN DRIVE ON CAPITAL

Labor Clash Leads to Mobilizing of Armed Masses.

CABINET MEETS TO PLAN ACTION

Army Is Called to Put Down Uprising of Foes of Reds.

Helsingfors, Finland, Feb. 28 (A.P.).—The army was ordered tonight to prevent a march on the capital by thousands of Finnish Fascists massed within 35 miles of Helsingfors.

The Cabinet, after an emergency meeting, announced it had confirmation that members of the Lapua, the Fascists of Finland, intended to march on Helsingfors in a drive against Marxism (Communism).

The Lapuans, said a Cabinet source, had a definite program, the main point represented by the slogan "Down with Marxism," but also including other aims. They met recently in Mantsala to organize the movement and there decided to march on Helsingfors.

The government learned that 4,000 armed men were concentrating in Mantsala Parish, and were saying they could muster 20,000 men for a march on the capital. Hundreds more were reported en route from Ostrobothnia to Mantsala to join the movement.

Cabinet Holds Special Session.

The cabinet held a special session tonight attended by the commander in chief of the army and other high officers. President Pehr Edwin Svinhufvud, who had planned to go to the country tomorrow, postponed his visit and presided over the cabinet.

The order to confine Helsingfors troops to barracks included cancellation of all leaves.

(An exchange telegraph dispatch said newspapermen who tried to reach Mantsala by motor car found all roads leading to the town guarded by armed patrols. When asked the reason for such procedure, the patrols replied: "There is a war. Only arms will speak." The insurgents threatened to destroy cameras if the news men tried to take photographs.)

Earlier in the day word had come from Mantsala, a town 35 miles northeast of Helsingfors, that a band of 4,000 armed men had taken charge of the parish and were demanding the resignation of Gov. Krudo Jalander of Nyland Province, and of the minister of the interior, Baron E. von Born. The government declared a state of seige.

Situation Held Critical.

At first it was thought the band of Lapua had congregated to prevent

First Lady to Go To Friend's Rites

Delays Trip to Florida to Attend Funeral for Mrs. Coffin.

Brunswick, Ga., Feb. 28 (A.P.).—Mrs. Herbert Hoover today delayed her trip to Florida to attend the funeral of a friend, Mrs. Howard E. Coffin, wife of the Detroit motor magnate.

Mrs. Hoover and her party arrived here aboard the Department of Commerce motorship Sequoia last night. They were expected to continue to Miami today, but Mrs. Hoover decided to remain until after services for Mrs. Coffin tomorrow. The Sequoia docked at St. Simons Island this morning, and Mrs. Hoover and her party were taken for a two-hour ride to points of interest.

Later the party came to Brunswick, and after meeting a local committee boarded the Sequoia, which had been brought to the municipal wharf. The ship then dropped out into the harbor for the night. As she went aboard the Sequoia Mrs. Hoover was handed a spray of roses sent from Washington by President Hoover. She said she would take them as a floral offering to Mrs. Coffin's funeral.

100 Russian Fishermen Believed Dead in Storm

Reval, Esthonia, Feb 28 (U.P.).—A group of about 100 Russian fishermen, reported marooned on floating ice off the Esthonian Coast, were believed tonight to have perished in a severe storm. At the request of the Soviet government, the Esthonian authorities organized an airplane expedition to search for the fishermen, but little hope was held that the expedition would be successful.

The reports said the fishermen were on a huge ice block when it was swept away from the coast during a storm.

2 Killed as Newspaper Staff Fight With Mob

Buenos Aires, Feb. 28 (U.P.).—A band of 150 extremist members of the Personalista Radical party fought a gun battle in the center of Buenos Aires today with the staff of the newspaper La Fronda. Two radicals were killed and 50 persons were wounded, several seriously.

The newspaper plant is in the fashionable Calle Florida. The staff of the paper, a Conservative publication owned by Francisco Uriburu, fought with revolvers.

The Radicals, who were refused permission to participate in the recent presidential and general elections by the provisional government of Lieut. Gen. Jose F. Uriburu, had just come from a mass meeting of 100,000 persons. Speakers had inflamed the audience by recounting the "persecutions" during his rule.

ONE SLAIN AND MANY HURT AS CUBA VOTES

Primary Election Is Step Toward Reorganization of Three Major Parties.

Havana, Cuba, Feb. 28 (A.P.).—One person was killed and several were wounded in political animosities today in Cuba's primary elections, the first step toward reorganization of the three recognized political parties for campaigns to come.

The voting, however, was more orderly than usual, although it ended with charges of fraud, coercion and ballot buying.

Over the island Liberals, Conservatives and Populars elected delegates to municipal assemblies. These will nominate candidates for local offices and choose members of provincial assemblies. The latter, after selecting provincial tickets, will elect delegates to the national convention preliminary to an election next November of municipal and provincial officials, including governors, and members of the legislature.

Although no clear trend was indicated in scattering returns tonight, newspaper observers said supporters of Clemente Vazquez Bello, one of three presidential aspirants in the Liberal party, apparently had triumphed.

Another sharp clash of Liberal chieftains, involving the gubernatorial aspirations of Commander Enrique Recio and God. Enrique Villena in Camaguey Province, produced scattered fighting. Recio's faction claimed a victory.

Populars were chiefly concerned with the matter of party leadership. Carmelo Urquiaga, majority floor leader in the House of Representatives, said his forces had won over those of Senator Celso Cuellar, present president of the party.

The superior electoral tribunal will receive results of the election and announce the victors within five days. It was estimated that approximately 65 per cent of the qualified voters cast ballots.

NEW HONOLULU ATTACK VICTIM IS NAVY WOMAN

NEIGHBOR NARROWLY ESCAPES SAME FATE

Maj. Fortescue Voices Faith Four Will Be Acquitted of Murder Charges.

Honolulu, Feb. 28 (A.P.).—A new attack on a naval man's wife occurred here last night as United States Department of Justice agents studied a crime situation which already has caused an official upheaval and a congressional investigation.

Mrs. J. H. Hope, wife of a machinist's mate, was assaulted in her home near Waikiki Beach. Today she was unable to identify Edward Wong, 23, a Chinese held by police, as her assailant.

The wife of another Navy man, Mrs. D. W. Curry, reported that a masked Oriental also forced his way into her home last night, but departed after making a vain demand for money. The two women are neighbors.

Warns of Return.

Mrs. Hope said her assailant entered her home about 7:30, and at the point of a gun demanded money. He searched the house for money before he tied the woman to a bed with stockings. Investigators said clothing had been torn from her body.

The assailant warned Mrs. Hope not to notify police or he would return and "get her."

Endeavoring to describe her assailant, Mrs. Hope late today told police she believed he was a Japanese. She said he was about five feet, five inches tall; wore a raincoat, light blue denim trousers, black shoes and was without a hat. With this description—she having seen his face for only a moment—police continued their search.

Mrs. Curry said the intruder in her home helped himself to a box of candy lying on the

Roosevelt Hailed On Reaching Isles

Cheered by Thousands on Arrival to Take Office in Philippines.

Manila, P. I. (Monday), Feb. 29 (A. P.).—Flower-bedecked boats, airplanes, troops and a great crowd of Americans and Filipinos greeted Theodore Roosevelt when he arrived here today to take office as Governor General of the Philippine Islands. Today was declared a holiday in Manila and twelve nearby provinces.

Early in the day thousands thronged Luneta Bayside Park, scene of the inaugural ceremonies. Roosevelt, the third man to become governor of the islands within four years, brought along the family Bible on which to take the oath of office. It was the same that his father used when he became President of the United States.

Reelection of Hoover Urged by Henry Ford

Hopes for Return of Old Methods of Banking; Loyal to Dry Law.

By RAYMOND CLAPPER.
(Copyright, 1932, by United Press.)

Detroit, Feb. 28 (U.P.).—At a time when economic pressure and political change have altered many men's opinions, Henry Ford stands steadfast in his hope for a return to "old-fashioned banking methods," his loyalty to prohibition and his faith in President Hoover.

In an exclusive interview with the United Press, coincident with the revelation that he is staking millions on the belief that the country will emerge from its difficulties, Ford made these declarations:

1. That the "high jinks and racketeering of boy bankers" are at an end and business soon will revive through a return to "fundamental principles of banking."

2. That "prohibition still is a necessity of the industrial age."

3. That Mr. Hoover should be reelected "in order to capitalize on the experiences of his first four years in the White House."

HENRY FORD.

"because he has done a first-class job, and as the result of his experience he ought to be of real service to the country."

"It takes a man four years to become thoroughly familiar with such a job as being President," he said. "And there is every reason to believe, as a result of that experience, that he

REVOLT IN PORTUGAL POSTPONED BY REDS

"Traitors" Reveal Uprising Plot and Troops Are Kept in Readiness.

Lisbon, Portugal, Monday, Feb. 29 (A.P.).—A revolutionary strike planned for today was called off at the last moment after the plot was divulged to the government.

The Communist party of Portugal, in ordering its members to remain at work, said two "traitors" in the party revealed the plans. The revolutionary outbreak, the Communists said, therefore was postponed to a more suitable time.

The government had charged that the rebels planned to cut off the water and electrical supplies of Lisbon.

The authorities ordered troops in neighborhing garrisons to be ready for any emergency.

[Just before midnight tonight London sources reported that telephonic communication between London and Lisbon had been disrupted. It was feared that serious trouble had broken out in the Portuguese capital, in view of the fact that disorders were known to be expected Monday morning. Madrid was also out of telephonic communication with Lisbon and the Associated Press was unable to gain contact with the Lisbon American Legation from Madrid.]

The government in announcing that the Libson police garrison and republican guards had been mobilized, declared that the subversive movement planned for Monday originated with Socialist Radical students, who were termed revolutionaries. The government said the students planned a great demonstration against President Oscar Carmona and intended to create disorders as well as a general strike. Early tonight police raided several meeting points for alleged revolutionaries, and jailed many of them.

At that time the government professed confidence in its precautions and predicted failure for the subversive movement.

BODIES OF 20 DEAD FOUND IN COAL MINE

Rescuers Continue Search for 18 Others Believed Killed in Blast.

Pocahontas, Va., Feb. 28 (A.P.).—Searching the depths of the blast torn Boissevain Mine near here, rescue workers tonight found 20 bodies of men caught in a blast yesterday. They continued to search for eighteen still missing. Eight of the bodies were brought to the surface.

The hoisting house was turned into an improvised morgue. Thirty-seven caskets, one less than the number of men believed dead, were brought from Bluefield, W. Va., and lined up in front of the hoisting house.

There was no demonstration when the first bodies were taken out. Relatives and friends were excluded from the area directly in front of the shaft and none was permitted to see the bodies.

The crowd stood outside the ropes, as it had for many hours, stoically silent, awaiting definite word of loved ones below. Women passed back and forth, serving coffee and sandwiches

Empire Democrats Outnumber G.O.P.

Albany, N. Y., Feb. 28 (U.P.).—There are 1,711,229 enrolled Democrats in New York State, as compared with 1,611,372 enrolled Republicans, according to figures made public by Secretary of State Edward G. Flynn. The G. O. P. has been surpassed in the enrollment for the first time in years, the figures show.

In 1930 the enrollment figures for the two old parties stood: Democrats, 1,544,740; Republicans, 1,552,153. In 1929 it stood: Democrats, 1,497,651; Republicans, 1,606,635. In 1928, the last presidential year, the figures were: Democrats, 1,950,781; Republicans, 2,176,090.

The last Democratic enrollment showed an increase in every county over the 1929 totals, while the Republican enrollment showed gains over 1929 in 49 counties, but losses in 8 others, including Albany, Alleghany, Erie, Madison, Rensselaer, Saratoga, Schuyler, Wyoming. There were Republican losses in Greater New York also.

New York Subway Denied Passengers

But 'Exercises' Itself Pending City's Decision as to Its Operator.

New York, Feb. 28 (U.P.).—Every night a ghostly train of ten empty cars rolls the length of Manhattan Island through a new subway that has ticket booths, turnstiles, block signals, and everything else it needs except customers.

The subway, extending from 207th street to a terminus far downtown at Chambers street, has been ready for operation for several months. No passengers may ride in it until the city decides who is going to operate it and how much fare is to be charged.

Meanwhile, thousands of dollars worth of equipment must be "exercised," switches must be kept in working order, and train crews must have dress rehearsals.

MOSES REPLIES GARNER MAKES PRESIDENCY BID

TEXAN HITS SENATOR AS AMUSING G. O. P.

Hyde Charges Democratic Relief Plan Would Aid Only 35,000.

(Associated Press.)

Speaker Garner's charge that President Hoover precipitated a panic, drew a sharp retort yesterday from Senator Moses (Republican), new Hampshire, suggesting that the Texan had begun his formal campaign for the Presidency, and in return another shot from Garner.

In the first notice taken by the Republicans of the Speaker's availability for the Presidency, Moses in a formal statement said Garner should "run true to form" and blame Mr. Hoover for all the world's ills. Since this "formal campaign" has begun, he said, Garner should also announce as a wet or a dry.

The Speaker, who has consistently declined to enter a contest for the Democratic Presidential nomination, said in a terse reply "the senator's statement will be, as usual, quite amusing to the reactionary element in the Republican party."

Heralds End of Truce.

Simultaneously, Senator Connally, of Texas, one of the Speaker's leading advocates, issued a statement through the Democratic national committee asserting Mr. Hoover "has been playing partisan politics while asking for a political truce."

The partisan declarations of the two senators heralded a flurry of preconvention activity on Capitol Hill and the end of the political truce that prevailed during enactment of emergency relief measures.

The contention of Democratic House leaders that their $132,500,000 emergency road construction bill would give employment to 1,000,000 men was challenged yesterday by Secretary Hyde, who said only 35,000 would be directly given work. At the same time, the Secretary of Agriculture said the legislation "does not go to the problem of unemployment on the basis of need." The bill was approved Saturday by the House by a 205-to-109 vote, with party lines broken, and sent to the Senate.

Roosevelt and Seabury.

Meanwhile, Democratic leaders saw further aggravation of their preconvention situation in Samuel Seabury's Cincinnati attack on Tammany with its implied criticism of Gov. Roosevelt, and Alfred E. Smith's renewed demand for a States' rights plank on prohibition. There was no comment on either, however, and it remains for the future to determine whether Seabury is out for the presidential nomination himself and where Tammany is going to throw its delegation support at Chicago.

Gov. Roosevelt, who will fight it out with Smith in the first presidential primary March 8, in New Hampshire, is described as viewing Seabury's criticism as "unfair." While the governor himself declined to comment, a close friend interpreted

BATTLE RENEWED AFTER KIANGWAN FALLS TO JAPAN

League's "Neutral 12" Scan New Peace Plan

(Copyright, 1932, by Associated Press.)

Geneva, Feb. 28.—The "neutral twelve" of the League of Nations Council were busy today studying informal proposals received yesterday from Japan with regard to "some scheme for a truce at Shanghai and the establishment of a neutral zone," but kept their deliberations secret.

It was learned from informed quarters that the Japanese proposals were not likely to receive a favorable response from the Chinese authorities.

The Japanese circulated their suggestions to individual members of the council only and did not present them to the league secretariat or the council as a body.

No immediate response appeared likely tonight, but the twelve councilmen made an appointment for a private meeting tomorrow afternoon.

Fresh Tokyo Troops Are Greeted With Bombardment.

SCENE VEILED BY HEAVY FOG

New Effort for Peace by Rival Armies Is Reported.

Shanghai (Monday), Feb. 29 (A.P.).—Attempts to arrange a peace formula were made aboard the British flagship Kent today between Admirals Nomura and Matsuoka of Japan, and Chinese officials, including Dr. Wellington Koo, former foreign minister, and the chief of staff of the Chinese Nineteenth Route Army.

The representatives of both sides were invited to the conference by Admiral Kelly, commander of the British fleet in Chinese waters. The result of the conference was not given out.

(Copyright, 1932, by the Associated Press.)

Shanghai (Monday), Feb. 29.—Chinese and Japanese artillery shook the countryside today in a bombardment which greeted fresh Japanese troops pouring into Shanghai from Koosung and punctuated reports of further efforts toward a peace between the rival armies.

Kiangwan, focal point on the Chapei-Woosung battle line, had fallen to the Japanese, apparently without a struggle, after days of crushing attack there.

The big guns of both sides roared in Chapei and beyond toward Kiangwan, however, splitting the thick atmosphere hanging over Shanghai in a continuation of the conflict.

Soon After Daylight.

The shelling began soon after daylight and continued intermittently well into the morning, many residents of Shanghai going to their offices to the accompaniment of the detonation.

If peace was near, it was not evident along the battle front.

Gen. Shirakawa said the Japanese command expected large Japanese forces to arrive in Shanghai today and tomorrow.

At least 500 new Japanese troops came ashore within the International Settlement, landing at the docks of the Japanese steamship line, Osaka Shosen Kaisha, a stone's throw below the Japanese consulate on the banks of the Whangpoo River.

That apparently was the answer to the question whether the incoming reinforcements would land in the settlement after the ambassadors of foreign powers had requested the Tokyo government not to land troops there.

Fog Becomse Thicker.

The fresh soldiers debarked from the transport Florida Maru.

The fogs over Shanghai and the lower Yangtze River were thicker than ever since the hostilities here began and what was occurring behind this veiled wall about Woosung and below was unknown.

But generally accepted reports said the major portion of the Eleventh Japanese Division, the spearhead of which arrived yesterday, was there on

REDS GRANT JAPAN RIGHT TO RAILWAY

Moscow, Feb. 28 (A.P.).—L. M. Karakhan, acting foreign commissar, informed Koki Hirota, Japanese Ambassador, today that Soviet Russia would consent to the movement of a limited number of Japanese troops over the Chinese Eastern Railway from Harbin eastward in Manchuria.

His statement followed an assurance by Ambassador Hirota that Soviet rights and interests would not be violated by Japanese activities in northern Manchuria. At the same time the Soviet official asked the ambassador to obtain an explanation from his government as to the massing of troops on the Soviet frontier of Korea.

The Chinese Eastern Railway is jointly owned by Russia and China. Japan requested permission to transport the troops on the ground that the "changing situation" in Manchuria made the protection of Japanese subjects there necessary.

Ambassador Hirota called on the acting foreign commissar with a statement in reply to M. Karakhan's questions last week relating to Japan's request to transport troops. Russia asked about reports that Japan was assisting antisoviet "White Guards" in Manchuria, and also asked an explanation of the character of the new independent state of Manchuria, formed under Japanese auspices.

"The Japanese government knows nothing about the proposal that the Japanese command should sign a contract for the transportation of Japanese troops over the Chinese Eastern Railway, and the Japanese government is inquiring of Japanese authorities in Manchuria," M. Hirota said.

"Concerning the activity of White guards and the formation of a new state, the Japanese government will wire supplementary instructions.

Lamont's Son Off to Russia To Consider Live Stock Job

Soviet Wants Him to Take Charge of Scheme for Raising Per Capita Consumption to Level Prevailing in This Nation.

Denver, Feb. 28 (A.P.).—Robert P. Lamont, jr., son of the Commerce Secretary, left today for New York, where he will sail on "the first boat available" for Moscow, to consider directing a Soviet scheme to develop the cattle industry.

In Moscow, Lamont will spend six weeks and decide then whether he accepts the Soviet offer, which would give him complete charge of cattle breeding. Mrs. Lamont, the former Frances Kent, widely known sculpturess, did not accompany her husband to New York.

Lamont will return to his 15,000-acre ranch, 40 miles south of Denver, after he completes his preliminary survey in Russia. If he accepts the position, Mrs. Lamont will accompany him back to Moscow.

"My negotiations by correspondence with the Soviet government officials have not been entirely satisfactory," Mr. Lamont said today. "I am going to Russia to study the situation. The Soviet officials are hopeful of raising the per capita consumption of live stock to 100 pounds a year, which would place it on a parity with this country. It would take about 20 years to accomplish this."

Mr. Lamont said Russia has about 35,000,000 cattle and 17,000,000 sheep, as compared to the 65,000,000 cattle and 60,000,000 sheep in the United States.

"Russia's population is 160,000,000 and ours 120,000,000 so you see what a job it will be to increase the Russian supply to the American standard."

Lamont came to Colorado 15 years ago after leaving the army at the close of the World War. He specializes in the breeding of Hereford cattle. Regardless of his decision on the Russian offer, Lamont said he would not dispose either of his Colorado ranch nor his herd of fancy Herefords.

He explained his consideration of the Russian offer is wholly without political significance.

"I am interested purely as a stockman," he said. "I am not a politician.

U. S. and League Accord Held Key to End Dispute

Bourg, France, Feb. 28 (A.P.).—Joseph Paul-Boncour, vice chairman of the French disarmament delegation, today told a gathering of war veterans it would be vain to expect "efficacious action from the League of Nations Council on the Sino-Japanese dispute without the United States."

Pershing to Quit Hospital Shortly

Physician Describes His Condition as Much Improved.

(Associated Press.)

Gen. John J. Pershing was expected last night by his physician, Maj. O. H. Quade of the Medical Corps, to leave Walter Reed General Hospital in a few days. He entered the hospital Friday to recuperate from a cold and slight laryngitis attack.

His physician said the general was "in fine shape" and that "there is absolutely nothing to be alarmed about" in his condition. The cold and laryngitis conditions are clearing up steadily, he said.

Gen. Pershing has not been confined to bed, resting in bed only as he sees fit without instructions from his physician.

Crew of Danish Ship Saved; U. S. Cutter Sinks Schooner

Small Boats From Two Rescue Vessels Take Off Aggersund's Sailors as She Founders; Fishing Craft Sent Down by Acushnet.

Aboard the S. S. American Importer, at sea, Feb. 28 (U.P.).—Two small boats manned by husky British and Swedish sailors carried the crew of the Danish steamship Aggersund to safety today after an all-night battle with high seas.

The rescued sailors were taken aboard the Swedish motorship Blankaholm at 52.40 north, 41.30 west, several hundred miles east of Newfoundland, where the Danish vessel was in distress along the northern steamship lane to Europe.

The Aggersund was damaged last Wednesday night. The British steamship Vardula answered her distress call and reported that she was standing by last night. The Blankaholm then veered from her course to aid in the rescue work.

The two rescue vessels approached as close as possible to the heavily listing Aggersund, which was tossed by rough seas. They were unable to put out rescue boats during the night, because of the danger of cracking them up against the ship.

This morning the Varduls sent out a small boat after the weather became more favorable. The Blankaholm also sent out a boat and they came alongside the Aggersund. The crew was taken off and the Aggersund was abandoned in a sinking condition.

The Aggersund was of 2,940 tons, built in 1892, and owned by the Dampskiish Hafnia. She was 311 feet long, 41 wide and 20 deep. She sailed out of Copenhagen.

Boston, Mass., Feb. 28 (A.P.).—The sinking of the New York fishing schooner George W. Elzey after it had collided with the Coast Guard cutter Acushnet off Cross Rip Lightship, in Nantucket Sound, was reported today by Coast Guard headquarters here. The Elzey's crew was taken aboard the Acushnet.

The collision occurred shortly after 8 o'clock last night as the Acushnet was proceeding to sea and the Elzey was returning to New York. The commander of the Acushnet, Chief Boatswain W. O. Egeland, radioed that

POPE DEPLORES WAR IN RADIO BROADCAST

Poor Reception Over Ocean Prevents Americans From Hearing Address.

Vatican City, Feb. 28 (A.P.).—Pope Pius XI declared in a radio broadcast today that its love of the fleshpots "is the source of disputes and wars that always have afflicted and still today afflict the world with such grief and suffering as perhaps never have been encountered in history."

The pontiff spoke specifically of the warfare in the Far East in his address on the heroic virtues of venerable Maria Assunta Pallotta, who died in China as a missionary, and said he hoped his benediction "will be an augury of universal peace and prosperity."

Pope Pius, broadcasting his benediction through the Vatican radio station, HVJ, addressed it specifically "to all those who suffer in this universal disturbance of work and of life, to all peoples of the earth, and in particular to the two great peoples (the Chinese and the Japanese) that in this moment call the attention of the whole world to the Far East."

Russia and Mexico Cited.

"To those who suffer for still grave and violent conditions of things in Russia, in Mexico and in Spain," he added, "and to those who control the destinies of the peoples, our benediction goes with the strong wish and humble, confident prayer to divine goodness that our paternal apostolic benediction everywhere and to all will carry and urge them toward Christian life."

He expressed the hope that this Christian life would "bear fruit and inspire a wish and a will for councils of peace and of mutual collaboration for the betterment of the lowly and the humble."

Citing the virtues of the missionary he was honoring, he contrasted them with "the spirit of the world which consists in a desire for the fleshly, in a desire for riches and in vanity of life."

Fount of Many Disputes.

"Those are the three principal things that drag the world and the individauls, families and peoples into all guilt and sins that contaminate them," he said. "Those are the fount of so many disputes and wars that have always afflicted and continue today to afflict the world with such deep anxiety and suffering, indeed, as perhaps never have been encountered in history."

New York, Feb. 28 (A.P.).—Poor reception conditions over the Atlantic today kept the United States from rebroadcasting the voice of Pope Pius XI on the occasion of a beatification ceremony at Vatican City. It was the second time this year that reception from HVJ, the papal short wave station, has been such as to prevent a broadcast in America. The previous one was on February 12.

This Extra Day in Year Costs Millions to Some

Chicago, Feb. 28 (A.P.).—Monday is the extra day that makes 1932 a leap year—and it also makes losses or profits of millions of dollars. Real estate experts estimated today landlords in Chicago alone will lose $4,000,000 because Monday is February 29 instead of March 1. Workers paid by the month or year also stand to lose a total of millions because of the extra day.

Federal employes in Chicago, paid on a monthly basis, suffer a total salary loss of $2,000,000 on the annual Government pay roll of $798,000,000.

Chinese Would Purchase Los Angeles for Relief

New York, Feb. 28 (A.P.).—Wilbur W. H. Pyn, of the Chinese Daily News, said today a campaign has been started among Chinese residents of the United States, Canada, Cuba and Mexico to purchase the U. S. Navy dirigible Los Angeles to be flown to China and used there to carry food to flood victims in the interior.

Pyn said the Navy had acknowledged that the Los Angeles is for sale. Under the terms of the Versailles treaty, it can not be used as an instrument of war.

kitchen table, then raised his mask and invited her to join him.

Mrs. Hope, the second naval man's wife to be attacked recently, was alone in her home. Her husband is with a contingent of the fleet sailing for the mainland to participate in naval maneuvers off Southern California.

At the emergency hospital where she was taken about midnight, doctors said positively she had been assaulted.

Navy officers joined police in investigating the assault. Wong was arrested today by Police Officer H. A. Chillingsworth after a visit to places the Chinese was known to frequent.

Commander R. W. Bates, in charge of the Navy shore patrol, directed the investigation for the Navy.

Fortescue Trial Nears.

As a result of other recent attacks a special session of the Territorial Legislature has been called and investigations by Congress and the Department of Justice been ordered.

Greatest attention was attracted by the brutal attack last September upon Mrs. Thalia Massie, wife of a naval officer, by five men. Four suspects are now awaiting retrial after the first jury disagreed.

The fifth man accused of that crime, Joseph Kahahawai, young Hawaiian, was abducted and slain January 8. A society woman and three naval men are to be tried March 10 on charges of second-degree murder for Kahahawai's lynching. They are Mrs. Granville Fortescue, Mrs. Massie's mother; Lieut. Thomas N. Massie, husband of the attacked woman, and E. J. Lord and Albert O. Jones, naval enlisted men.

Expresses Confidence.

New York, Feb. 28 (A.P.).—The American prints a copyright statement under the signature of Maj. Granville R. Fortescue, in which he expresses confidence his wife, Grace, and three other Americans will be acquitted of murder charges.

While affirming his belief the four defendants should have been turned over to naval authorities, Maj. Fortescue indicates his willingness to abide by the action of the Hawaiian Territorial Court.

Discovery of Love Secret Seen Wasted Upon Girls

By JOHN J. DALY

NOW is let loose upon the world an age-old secret, handed down from the very beginning of recorded time, from mother to daughter, closely guarded and hitherto harbored in the breast of womanhood.

A Russian scientist rushes in with the news, like Prometheus stealing the fire from heaven. Dr. Boris Sokoloff, handing out leap year advice where it is least needed, tells the girls that four words, and only four, form the keystone of the feminine vocabulary.

Armed with these four words, the doctor says, any girl can marry any man in the world if she repeats very often to him the magic phrase, "You are so wonderful." The big goof!

It goes, without saying, that the good doctor is carrying coals to Newcastle. Where is the woman who has not known this all along? It is common usage in all languages, including the Scandanavian. The dead language, Latin, features it: Tam admirabilis es tu!

* * * *

EVEN in leap year the advice is uncalled for, and coming as it does from a scientist, it goes to prove that science once again interfering in the natural order, entering the domain of the spiritual, prepares to open another one of those boxes, like the one Zeus gave to Pandora.

From the time of Eve, every woman has known the catch-phrase. Every man, naturally, was unaware of the formula—until science removed the veil. Now, released to the world by the power of the press, the very advice the doctor gives the girls, from their mothers' note-books, may inadvertently act against them. There is a young and growing colony of sophisticates in short pants, boys who put on long trousers when they are 14 or thereabouts—and they are sure to hear what the doctor tells the girls. One of these fellows—or all of them—hearing in some future leap year the honeyed phrase of Heloise and Beatrice and Cleopatra and Helen poured into masculine ears may turn away. Then, where would the world be? Again, one of the boys, seeing his end draw near, might get rough with a purring poetess of the night, telling her to "Lay off that Sokoloff stuff."

* * * *

CERTAINLY, any girl who repeats often enough, "You are so wonderful," can marry any man in the world—for that is what the sidewalk psychologists would call "The Come On," the magic halter that has from the beginning of time led manhood down the primrose path to the altar, orange blossoms strewn in his path.

All the lovely ladies of all time have known this, and the only novelty, of course, is how a man finally came upon the secret. As a reward for this contribution to the sum total of human knowledge, even the men may join the women in telling him, "You are so wonderful." There is danger, though, that the modern Prometheus may be bound. If only one girl starts repeating the phrase to him he will find out, what his forefathers learned before him, that he is not one-half so wonderful as he thinks he is—or as the girl may say he is.

to the watchers and the rescue workers as they came from the mine.

None of the bodies recovered has been identified.

Coroner George W. Gillispie began an inquest after the eight bodies were taken into the hoisting house.

As the night wore on more men went into the mine to aid in the search. It was estimated that about 135 men were underground.

The first two bodies found were beside a mine car, and it is believed the men were car greasers. They were reached after rescue crews, commanded by A. G. Lucas, Virginia mine inspector, had spent hours erecting brattice after brattice to drive out the poison-laden air. As the air behind one brattice cleared, the men advanced a few feet, erected another, waited until the air cleared and then repeated. When they had penetrated through the main entry their work increased, for the large basin area was catacombed with entries and workrooms.

The crews were forced out of the mine once by the gas, and when the struggle was resumed they were further handicaped by great heaps of jagged slate and shattered mine timbers which jutted across passages.

Part of the men engaged in combing the shattered mine are inspectors ordered there by Robert M. Lambie, chief of the West Virginia department of mines. Mr. Lambie said at Charleston, W. Va., that "we do not recognize State lines when things like this occur." The United States Bureau of Mines rescue car at Norton also is at the scene.

Curiosity seekers got no farther than this town, where 30 West Virginia and Virginia State troopers turned them back by the hundreds. All cars were stopped and a valid reason was necessary if any were permitted to go toward the mine.

Among the dozens who escaped are two Negroes, Henry Watkins and Edward Kirtly, both of Bluefield, Va. Watkins collapsed when smoke billowed into the room where they were working and he was carried out by Kirtly. The latter said that as they neared the mine surface he heard a "jar" which he believed was the explosion that entombed the others.

Worn and exhausted, one contingent of 50 rescuers came out of the mine and was replaced immediately by a crew of equal size. They took up the work of groping through the many entries and rooms, working slowly as gas still filled the mine and slate and broken timbers barred the way.

James Elwood Jones, vice president and general manager of the Pocahontas Fuel Co., spent about two hours in the blast area with A. G. Lucas, chief of the Virginia Mine Department. Both came out when crews were changed, grimy and dirty as the men with whom they worked.

Province. He was with Representative Ricardo Campo, Liberal, at the time.

In Ciego De Avila, Camaguey Province, supporters of Enrique Villena and Enrique Recio, candidates for the Liberal nomination for governor, fought with pistols, hammers and other weapons. An undetermined number of persons were injured.

Santiago dispatches said three bombs exploded there, one in the home of Sen. Carlos Clavel, another in that of Dr. Eguardo Hacha, brother of the mayor, and the third in front of the Provincial Palace. Alarm at the Provincial Palace explosion proved fatal to Senora Flora Aguero, who had just given birth to a child.

Today's primaries were the first step in the reorganization of Cuba's three major political parties—Liberals, Conservatives and Populars—preliminary to November's elections. Municipal assemblies name Provincial asemblymen, who in turn select delegates to the national conventions.

In November mayors, municipal councilmen, provincial governors and councilmen, half the House of Representatives and two senators, the latter to fill vacancies caused by deaths, will be elected.

The Liberals, members of President Gerardo Machado's own party, looked beyond today's primaries and beyond November's partial elections to the vote in 1934 for president. Aspirants to succeed President Machado are Gov. Jose R. Barcelo, of Oriente Province, who has formally announced his candidacy; Clemente Vasquez Bello, president of the Senate, and Senator Viriato Guttierrez.

A polling place in Santo Domingo, Santa Clara Province, was burned in today's disorders. Sixty policemen resigned in Matanzas, capital of the province, presumably in order to vote, their recent incorporation by presidential decree into the national militia having deprived them of the ballot.

Conservative ranks were split by the request of former President Mario G. Menocal, their leader, that his supporters abstain from voting. Liberals and Populars, however, fought their interparty battles with enthusiasm.

Shorter Workday Is Urged by Green

(Associated Press.)

A new demand for shorter working hours as "the only fundamental solution of unemployment" was made yesterday by William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor.

"At present," he said, "our conservative estimate shows that there actually is no more than 35 hours of work a week for each wage earner if all who want work are to have jobs.

"From now on we must look ahead to a long perid of high unemployment unless hours of work are adjusted."

The Federal Reserve Board's monthly summary of business conditions reported that "the volume of factory employment declined by more than the usual seasonal amount between the middle of December and the middle of January."

The American Railway Association reported class 1 roads had 195,462 freight cars, or 9 per cent of the total, in need of repair on February 1. This was an increase of 7,796 since January 1.

$18,000 in Jewels Stolen in Illinois

Taxi Driver Tells Police 3 Bandits Took Boxes From Trunks.

Chicago, Feb. 28 (A.P.).—Mile Russell, a Peoria, Ill., taxicab driver, was taken into custody by local police today after he reported he had been forced to drive here from Peoria by three bandits who took three tin boxes from a trunk which he had been hired to deliver to a railroad station.

The boxes, he told police, contained $18,000 worth of jewelry.

Peoria police said Harris Baskin, representing the New York firm of Baskin Brothers, wholesale jewelers, had reported the nonappearance yesterday of Russell with the trunk containing the jewels at the railroad station. Baskin, they said, told them he had hired a taxi driver to take his trunk to the station.

Vigil of Dog for Week Leads to Master's Body

Lusk, Wyo., Feb. 28 (A.P.).—The vigil that a little mongrel dog kept for a week beside the body of his master has led to the discovery of the body of Mauritz Aronstein, pioneer Wyoming prospector.

TARIFF NEAR, SHIPS JAM BRITISH PORTS

Huge Cargoes Arrive From All Parts of World to Avoid Paying Levy.

London, Feb. 28 (A.P.).—The London dock district in the Thames Estuary was jammed today with ships from all parts of the world, which hoped to pass customs before 5 p. m. Monday, when Great Britain erects her 10 per cent tariff wall.

With the opening of customs houses Tuesday morning a general 10 per cent tariff will be levied against all imports with only few exceptions, marking the passing of the world's last great free trade country.

While an estimated 200 cargo vessels stood at docks or in the lower reaches of the Thames awaiting berths, other ships raced against fierce channel gales to reach London, Hull, or other southern British ports to unload before the zero hour Monday.

U. S. Liner Included.

Among the vessels in Tilbury dock was the United States liner President Harding, which, for the first time in her history has called at London with a 3,364-ton general cargo.

She broke into her usual passenger run from New York to Hamburg, via Cobh and Plymouth, to make the stop. About 400 men were employed to unload her and they worked by arc lights all last night so the task could be finished, and the vessel proceed with her fretting passengers.

Other vessels already docked or awaiting berths included ships of Germany, Belgium, Finalnd, Russia, Holland, Portugal, Denmark and Spain.

Huge Cargoes Arrive.

Thousands of tons of fruit, vegetables, tinned milk, margarine, bacon, butter, eggs, hardware, glassware and textile goods arrived today at Hull. Extra cargoes of grain, oil, sago, rice, and flour reached Liverpool in ships from Spain, China and Japan.

There also were vast consignments of timber from Denmark and Sweden unloading at Liverpool. The S. S. Tairoa, which arrived in the Thames yesterday, hastily unloaded £205,000 ($705,200) in butter and cheese from New Zealand.

For several days Lloyds and other insurance brokers have done a moderate business in insurance against failure to arrive ahead of the deadline, one ship's owner having paid £2,500 ($8,600) protection against payment of £5,000 ($17,200) duty if the ship got in late.

Detroit "Blind-Pig" Pickets to Remain

Police Head Promises to Continue Questioning of Patrons.

Detroit, Feb. 28 (A.P.).—Police Commissioner James K. Watkins announced today that picketing of the city's 981 known speakeasies by patrolmen will continue "as long as is necessary to drive every last one of them out of business."

The picketing system, introduced by Watkins last year, consists of stationing one or more patrolmen in front of known saloons to question all visitors. It was substituted for the "tipover" raid system, under which police squads frequently without search warrants, wrecked the interiors of suspected blind pigs.

Half a dozen cabarets already have closed their doors because patrons were shy about braving the scrutiny of patrolmen stationed at the entrances. The 981 speakeasies enumerated are those listed by precinct commanders. Last August a similar sutvey showed 1,561 places in operation.

Man Kills Self on Eve Of Bigamous Wedding

Andover, Mass., Feb. 28 (U.P.).—Albert McQuiggan, 27, who was to have been married today, committed suicide at the home of a cousin on the eve of what would have been his bigamous wedding.

Police Capt. George A. Dane received an anonymous telephone call informing him that McQuiggan already had a wife and two children at Ishpeming, Mich., whom he deserted a year ago. He warned McQuiggan against possible imprisonment if he went through with the marriage. McQuiggan told the police captain he would "patch matters up somehow." He shot himself through the head.

Attacker Beats Woman And Son, 8, With Ax

New Orleans, Feb. 28 (U.P.).—Mrs. Frank Lala, 29, and her 8-year-old son, Anthony, were beaten with a handax and critically wounded by a Negro today after he had attempted to assault the young married woman in her bedroom. The woman's husband, a taxicab driver, was at work.

Three Negro men and three Negro women had been arrested tonight in connection with the attack. Police squads sought Leonard Sears, 23-year-old nephew of one of the Negro women held.

Man Is Killed in Leap To Escape From Fire

Chicago, Feb. 28 (A.P.).—Emil Spaly, 28, today jumped through a window to escape a fire that had broken out in his third-floor room. His body was impaled on a picket fence in the court below. He died instantly.

Spaly came to Chicago several years ago from Greenwood, Ark. Police reported finding in his room evidence indicating the fire started while alcohol and gin were being mixed.

SOVIET JOB STUDIED BY SON OF LAMONT

The problem of the Russians in trying to improve the quality of their live stock is so tremendous that no stockman could help but be interested."

Mr. Lamont said that if he accepted the Russian offer he probably would sign a one-year contract. Although the initial offer of the Russian government was said to be $50,000 a year, Lamont's decision, his friends said, would depend on the willingness of the country to tackle its cattle breeding problem in a scientific way, rather than on any question of salary.

Garment Strike Is Step Nearer End in New York

New York, Feb. 28 (A.P.).—Another step toward ending the garment strike here was taken today when strike leaders approved the new working agreement between the affiliated Dress Manufacturers Association and the International Ladies' Garment Workers Union.

Strikers will vote on the agreement in sixteen designated places tomorrow. Leaders decided, however, to hold another picketing demonstration tomorrow morning.

PHILIPPINE FREEDOM BILL SCORED BY KING

Senator Plans to Introduce Substitute to Give Up Isles in 3 Years.

(Associated Press.)

The Philippine independence bill which the Senate territories committee has decided to report favorably, was described yesterday by Senator King (Democrat), Utah, as "incongruous in some respects." He said he would introduce a substitute calling for independence in three years.

The committee legislation would provide for independence in about 19 years.

Referring to it, Senator King said: "I fear that it will prove in its operation unsatisfactory to the Philippines and unsatisfactory to us. It keeps the United States in control of the islands for approximately 20 years, makes the United States responsible for internal questions relating to the Philippines, for their safety and their security.

"The bill declares that the Filipinos owe their allegiance to the United States, but they may not have the rights other citizens of the United States enjoy. They may not come to the continental United States, they may not freely export their commodities, they may not freely bring into the continental United States the products of their toil and their land."

Manila, Feb. 28 (A.P.).—Manuel Quezon, president of the Philippine Senate, predicted today that independence would be granted the Philippines within two or three years, if the present Congress fails to take such action.

He sent a cable to the independence commission at Washington approving their reported endorsement of the compromise Hawes-Cutting bill, revamped by the Senate committee to provide freedom for the islands in nineteen years. The nineteen-year proposal, however, brought objections from the Philippine Civic Union, an organization of irreconcilables, which announced that a mass meeting would be held shortly to protest against any compromise which would delay independence.

Meanwhile, all talk of noncooperation with the new governor general, Theodore Roosevelt, was dropped as leaders of the Nacionalista party conferred in preparation for his welcome tomorrow.

Rites Tomorrow For Raymond Ford

Route Agent for The Post Will Be Buried in Fairfax Cemetery.

Masonic funeral services for Raymond Ford, 32 years old, for many years a route agent for The Post, who died Saturday in his home at 5805 Fourth street northwest, following a brief illness, will be held tomorrow afternoon at 1:30 o'clock at the residence. Interment will be in Fairfax Cemetery, Fairfax, Va.

Mr. Ford was a lifelong resident of Washington. He was educated in the District public schools and had served as a machinist in the Washington Navy Yard. About 18 years ago he joined the circulation staff of The Post and served as route manager for Arlington County and Alexandria, Va. He took an active part in Masonic activities and held membership in Stansbury Lodge.

Surviving Mr. Ford are his widow, Mrs. Nellie Fay Ford, his father, George Ford, who is now in Florida, and a brother, Lee Ford, of Boston, Mass. He had no children.

FASCISTS IN FINLAND UNITE FOR UPRISING

reprisals for a disturbance of yesterday, when 400 men, armed with machine guns, shot up a labor meeting. Apparently none was injured, but the group warned a Social Democrat in the Finnish Diet, who was lecturing on Marxism, never to show his face in Mantsala again. Fort police were helpless to interfere.

Minister von Born, before the cabinet meeting tonight, told the Associated Press the situation at Mantsala had created a "critical situation throughout the country."

"The police are absolutely powerless to deal with this kind of disturbance," he said, "and order can be restored only with the help of the army and civil guard."

Government sources said they believed the leader of the movement at Mantsala was Maj. Gen. Martti Walenius, former chief of the army general staff, who was discharged from his post two years ago for his alleged part in the kidnaping of a former President of Finland, Stahlberg.

The Lapua, or Pappo, is the answer of the peasants of southern Finland to Communism, and has sprung up in the last two years with great vigor and a rigorous system of military discipline.

As early as July, 1930, the group had become so powerful as to gain a presidential review of a parade in the capital and cheers to the echo from 20,000 Helsingfors residents who lined the route of march.

In the same year some 400 Lapua obeyed with great show of discipline an order to surrender to the authorities on charges of kidnaping. The order came from their unnamed leader. Baron E. Von Born at that time stated he hoped for leniency because of the "patriotic motives" which actuated the offenders. No drastic punishments were put on record.

Gen. Krudo Jalander, the Governor of Nyland Province, whose resignation was demanded by the Lapua yesterday, at one time charged them with threatening his death unless he resigned. He had earned their enmity by his sarcastic criticism of their methods.

The Communist movement in Finland has brought some harsh measures from the government, which at various times has accused Soviet plotters of being active.

$18.39 IS PER CAPITA COST OF EACH STATE

More Than 300 Per Cent Rise From $5.14 Average of 1917 Is Shown.

(Associated Press.)

The Bureau of the Census announced yesterday that the average per capita contribution to the cost of State government in the United States in 1930 was $18.39, an increase from $17.11 in 1929 and a more than 300 per cent jump from the $5.14 average of 1917.

Total outlays of 48 State governments for the year were $2,290,270,059; aggregate revenue receipts were $2,243,110,687, and total net indebtedness was $1,833,427,871.

Motor fuel taxes led all other sources of revenue in value, the 48 States collecting $399,523,438 from that source. Other leaders were general property taxes, from which $345,186,629 was realized; motor vehicles licenses, from which $296,423,525 was collected, and special property taxes totaling $96,451,517. Forty-five States collected $180,794,241 in inheritance taxes, and fifteen States collected $76,530,014 in income taxes.

31 Per Cent of Total.

Thus receipts from motor fuel taxes and motor vehicle licenses combined constituted 31 per cent of the total State revenue for the year, and showed an increase of 143.3 per cent since 1925. During the same five-year period receipts from general property taxes decreased 3.7 per cent; receipts from inheritance taxes increased 110.5 per cent; receipts from special property taxes increased 7 per cent, and receipts from income taxes increased 177.9 per cent.

Total receipts of the 48 State governments exceeded by $741,614,819 total disbursements for the year exclusive of permanent improvements, but was $47,159,372 less than the total payments including those for permanent improvements. For the years 1926, 1927, and 1928, the States as a whole had a surplus of revenue receipts after meeting all governmental costs including capital outlays for permanent improvements. In 1930, 23 States, individually, not only balanced their budgets but had a surplus of revenue receipts after meeting all governmental cost payments, and of these 23, twenty showed a reduction in their net indebtedness.

Operation and maintenance of the general departments of State government constituted the bulk, 60.7 per cent, of total outlays for the year. Outlays for permanent improvements constituted 34.4 per cent; 4.4 per cent went for interest on debts, and 0.4 per cent was for operation and maintenance of public service enterprises.

General Departments.

The share allocated to operation and maintenance of general departments was distributed: 40.2 per cent for education; 18.1 per cent for highways; 16.1 per cent for charities, hospitals and corrections; 7.9 per cent for general government; 5.7 per cent for protection of person and property; 5.4 per cent for conservation and development of resources, and the remainder distributed among health and sanitation work, recreation, retirement and pension funds, and miscellaneous.

Apportionments for education for the year increased by $28,811,109 over 1929, and interest charges also increased $7,293,920.

Payments for operation and maintenance of the general departments for the 48 States amounted to $1,390,505,636, or $11.40 per capita. This includes $368,322,898 apportionments for education to minor civil divisions.

Increase In Indebtedness.

The net indebtedness was $15.03 per capita, as against $14.04 in 1929, and $4.39 in 1917. Twenty-eight States brought about a decrease in indebtedness, but the aggregate increase for the year was $143,601,323.

For 1930 the assessed valuation of property in the 48 States amounted to $165,727,457,376. The amount of general property taxes levied for State purposes was $386,596,952, or $3.17 per capita as against $3.06 in 1929 and $1.83 in 1917.

The increase over 1929 in assessed valuation of property subject to general property tax was $2,044,324,449, and the increase in the levy was $18,219,650.

Two Capital Men Seized On Rum-Driving Counts

Two Washington men were arrested yesterday afternoon on charges of driving while under the influence of liquor and other counts near Waldorf, Md., and convicted and fined by Justice of the Peace A. B. Gardner. One was remanded to jail at La Plata in default of his fine.

They gave their names as Eugene H. Kirby, of 1333 Belmont street northwest, and Reed Ledman, of 1726 Thirty-fourth street northwest. Kirby was convicted on charges of driving under influence of liquor and reckless driving and fined $102. Ledman was found guilty of driving under influence of liquor, reckless driving and failing to exhibit permit. He was remanded to jail at La Plata in default of a fine of $114.25.

REELECTION OF HOOVER URGED IN STATEMENT BY HENRY FORD

Ford told me his thoughts on politics, banking, business and prohibition while he sat, his chair tilted back reflectively, at his experimental laboratory at Dearborn. These thoughts, it was plain, occupy his mind almost constantly, despite his attention to the problem of starting manufacture of the 1,500,000 automobiles he plans to produce this year.

"Most of the high jinks of financing is over and I hope we have got rid of much of the racketeering in high finance," Ford continued. "Unless we are pretty sure we have, there is no use trying to do much. People are still cautious, but at bottom this country is absolutely sound and I do not say that in a Pollyanna sense."

"Mr. Hoover has done more than he is given credit for. He was one of the first to warn the country of coming disaster. Soon after his election, and before he took office, he conferred with Andrew Mellon, and the result was a series of warnings to the country.

"Were the warnings heeded? They were not! Congressmen wanted to investigate and impeach Mr. Mellon for attempting to injure the business of the country. Some of our so-called ablest bankers resented the efforts of both Hoover and Mellon to head off the approaching trouble."

Ford explained that the warnings he had in mind were principally the efforts made in the spring and summer of 1929 through the Federal Reserve System to tighten credit and put the brakes on stock market speculation which was running values up out of all proportion to realities. He was critical of one type of banking which he referred to as the "boy bankers." In his own large operations, he has done his own financing. He has seen many rivals encounter difficulties by putting themselves in the hands of large financial operators.

Fundamental Banking Ideas.

"We should return to the fundamental ideas of banking and get away from the ideas of boy bankers," Ford said. "A bank is, first, a place of security. Security depends as much on the honor and experience of the banker as it does upon burglar-proof vaults.

"Second, a bank is the pool of all the financial resources of the community, to be used for the development of the community. Bankers are responsible for the kind of things they finance. If they finance the big bootleggers, or the stock gamblers, or any form of racketeer, they are misusing their bank and injuring the Nation. It is mostly the younger, reckless bankers that come to grief. The careful, conservative, older banker usually survives with his bank intact."

Racket Out of Control.

"The Constitution gives Congress control over money and we have farmed out that control in part to private business. Some have made a racket out of this control when as a matter of fact the function of banking is a public utility."

He outlined his formula for business recovery as follows:

"A lot of people seem to expect that the kind of business they knew previous to 1929 will return. I am sure business will return, but not that kind of business. Easy times are over for a long time in this country. A new world is to be made and that is never an easy job. We used to do our best by spurts. From now on we shall have to do our best all the time in everything.

Still Favors Prohibition.

"The only way this country can keep its head above water and come through safe is for every one to start what he can where he is, and to keep doing the best he knows how as long as he can. That is what makes better conditions. We need a lot of self-starters in this country, men who will do what needs doing whether any one hires them to do it or not."

Ford is unwavering in his faith in prohibition.

"We have put it in the Constitution and we will never take it out," he said. "The country couldn't run with it out now. That is the industrial fact. The main fact is this: The United States is out in the country. The real centers of our Nation are the small towns. The plain people and all the housewives are for personal freedom from liquor."

Long Says Misery In U. S. Is Ignored

Charges Destitutes' Cries Fall on Deaf Ears of Nation's Capital.

Declaring he had become weary in political fights in his home State and wanted to get as far away from America as possible, Senator Huey P. Long, of Louisiana, in a radio address last night, said he had chosen the United States Senate as the ideal spot.

"Here in Washington we can not hear the millions of people in America crying because they are hungry and want something to eat," he said. "The cries of the American farmers who are being dispossessed of their homes because they can not pay the interest on Federal Land Bank loans, they can not be heard in Washington. The wails of the unemployed and of their sick and disabled wives and children—of these Washington is immune. * * * Even the cries of the Lord are not heard in this metropolis. That warning of our Creator that the wealth of the land, the fruits of the earth and that the blessings of the Almighty should be shared by all the people, such is not known nor heard here in Washington.

"As a party matter the leadership of the Republicans is scarcely less to blame than the leadership of the Democrats today. The recalcitrants, the reactionaries, the sympathizers and agents of the plutocrats, are in the saddle for the Republicans and largely for the Democrats. They are aping one another," he declared.

U. S. Held to Blame For Own Joblessness

Internal policies rather than world-wide economic maladjustment are responsible for unemployment conditions in this country, Representative Kent E. Keller, of Illinois, yesterday told the Washington Secular League at a meeting in Musicians Hall.

"Except for England and Germany," he said, "the nations of Europe are enjoying a fair degree of prosperity. Our loss of 30 billion dollars national income last year as against our annual receipts for 1928 is mainly attributable to internal policies. The prevailing paralysis could have been prevented by enlightened legislation, and future panics might be made impossible by intelligent enactments."

EMBARGO FAVORED ONLY AS LAST STEP

Church Council States U. S. Should Stay Out of Oriental War.

New York, Feb. 28 (A.P.).—An embargo on trade only "as a last resort" in the United States' efforts to restore peace in the Far Eastern crisis was advocated today by the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America in a special message to churches.

"If every other measure for the restoration of peace should fail, and the other nations by concerted action should declare that either party to the conflict has resorted to force in violation of its treaty obligations, and should consequently sever trade and financial relations with such nation," the message said, "we believe the United States, as a last resort, should declare an embargo on trade with that nation.

"It should be explicitly understood that such action will not include a naval blockade or a resort to any other type of naval or military pressure.

Opposition to War.

"While aware of the objections which may be brought against the use of an embargo, we are convinced that such a collective withholding of trade is a valid instrument of social discipline and vastly preferable to allowing the war to take its course."

The council's message listed three other propositions ahead of the embargo as measures to be adopted by the United States in relation to the Chinese-Japanese situation.

1. That "under no circumstances whatsoever should the United States allow itself to be drawn into a war with either China or Japan, nor should it join with the other powers in any measures of military coercion."

Ban on Arms Export.

2. That strong indorsement be given the Stimson policy of refusing to recognize national advantages gained by military means in violation of treaties.

3. That exportation of arms and munitions to Japan or China be forbidden.

In a cablegram dispatched to the Christian councils of both Japan and China, the council said:

"While humbly confessing the sins of Western peoples in their national policies, we feel the time has now come for Christian people in all nations to unite in upholding the new peace machinery of the world."

SENATOR WESLEY L. JONES, OF WASHINGTON.

LIFE has been a serious matter for Wesley Livesy Jones, the senior senator from Washington. He was born in an atmosphere of tragedy, arriving in the world three days after the death of his father. He obtained his academic and legal education by working on the side. Then, to cash in on his knowledge, he became a pioneer, migrating from his native Illinois to the Northwest country, settling in Washington before that region had attained Statehood.

All that happened to Wesley Jones in early life—the sad circumstances surrounding his birth, the long, hard struggle for an education and a start in life—is written on his face. It is seen in his straight, determined mouth, his square jaw and in his dark, serious eyes, surmounted by heavy eyebrows that sweep upward from his nose in the shape of a V. He rarely smiles.

Senator Jones first came to Congress as a representative-at-large in 1899. Ten years later he was elected to the Senate, and he has been in the upper house since. He is one of the hardest workers the Capitol has ever known. Yet, ironically, the country at large knows him chiefly as the author on one bill—the so-called Jones "five and ten" law, prescribing drastic penalties for prohbition violations. In Jones' opinion, perhaps, that is one of the least important of the laws that bear his name. A label-loving public, however, prefers to know him as "Five and Ten" Jones.

In the 33 years he has been in Congress, Jones has put through a vast amount of legislation, including the merchant marine act of 1920, a measure designed to recapture for America the glory that was hers in the days of the clipper ships.

Jones, a deeply religious man, taught a Methodist Sunday school for 26 years. His only diversion from work, evidently, is golf. He comes up for reelection next fall.

BOYCOTT IS OPPOSED BY POWERS ABROAD

America Reemphasizes View Against Recognizing New Oriental Treaties.

(Associated Press.)

Whatever the reaction of Europe to Japan's new truce offering, it was reemphasized in high quarters yesterday that the United States will decline to recognize such Japanese gains in either Shanghai or Manchuria as are obtained in violation of existing treaties.

Standing firm upon that position, this government is expectantly awaiting developments at the League of Nations assembly meeting this week, where the United States position doubtless will figure.

It can now be said that the American Government strongly opposes proposals for a boycott against Japan. Responsible officials, it was revealed, have sounded out President Hoover's sentiment and that prevailing in both executive and legislative branches of the Government and found almost unanimous opposition to such a step.

In addition, American observers in Europe have reported through diplomatic channels that the major powers abroad likewise are opposed to a boycott plan.

Could Easily Lead to War.

The outlook of high officials here upon the various proposals for a boycott was outlined as follows:

A boycott could easily lead to war.

The practical development of a boycott would involve the closing of various industries in all the countries concerned.

Thus, such a move would approximate a war upon the civilians of those countries.

In turn, this would generate bitterness, leading to violence against the citizens of the boycotting countries who were residing in the boycotted nation, and vice versa.

With the responsibility resting upon all nations to protect their own citizens, international violence might result.

Pressure Upon League.

State Department officials have received reports that although boycott proposals have "no root" in the leading European powers, many of the smaller nations have brought continued pressure upon the league to take such a step as an illustration of its protective powers.

It was learned that President Hoover personally directed Secretary Stimson to dispatch the now historic note of January 7 to Japan, declaring that this country would not recognize any right, title or benefit gained by Japan through violation of either the Kellogg pact or the nine-power treaty.

Although no direct representation was made to other nations to join the United States in this move, a statement was made at the time that if they reached similar decisions an effective bar would be formed against future treaty violations.

Those directing America's foreign policy were said yesterday to have received reports that the leading European powers were doubtful whether they could take such a positive step.

New Enforcement Method.

The President is represented by those close to him as feeling that this Government's stand constitutes a new method of treaty enforcement, raising to a high pitch the employment of moral force against such violations. It was said he regards this ultimatum as far more effective than an embargo, allowing independence of action for the United States, but at the same time offering a common basis for world action.

A three-point plan for United States action in the Far Eastern crisis—culminating in an economic boycott—was urged on President Hoover yesterday by the Board of Temperance and Social Service of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

A letter addressed to the President and signed by Bishop James Cannon, jr., and Eugene L. Crawford, respectively chairman and secretary of the board, said:

"We appeal to our Government to urge prompt and united action by the governments of the several nations signing the Nine-Power Treaty of 1922.

1. To demand immediate cessation of hostilities, by both China and Japan.

Arbitration Idea Urged.

2. To require an agreement by both China and Japan to submit their differences to arbitration by whatever agency may be agreed upon by the representatives of the government's signatory to the nine power treaty.

3. In the event of refusal by either China or Japan to cease hostilities and to submit to arbitration, to unite in declaring an immediate embargo on arms and munitions and an immediate economic boycott against the nation refusing to do so.

"We believe that such prompt action by our government would be approved by our people, would meet our responsibility as one of the nations signatory to the nine power treaty, and would be effective in putting an end to the present horrible conditions, which are not only destroying property and lives in China, but which are imperiling the peace of the world."

New York Chinese Give to War Fund

Women Leave Seclusion to Collect $5,000 for Defense.

New York, Feb. 28 (U.P.).—The red and gold dragon of imperial China danced through the streets today asking funds to fight Japan.

More than $5,000 in nickels, dimes, quarters and notes were tossed into two huge flags which preceded the gyrating beast by thousands of Chinese who jammed the streets of Chinatown, hung out of windows and fire escapes or stood on roofs of buildings.

The fete was in complete charge of the Chinese women of New York, who, for the first time in local history, abandoned their traditional seclusion and appeared in public for the cause of their war-stricken country.

DOCTORS' LUNGS PUT LIFE IN 'DEAD' BABY

Working in Relays, Hospital Staff Restores Breath to Foundling.

Boston, Feb. 28 (U.P.).—Boston City Hospital physicians today brought back from apparent death a day-old waif, found abandoned in an alley, its body rigid and face black from near strangulation.

A wash cloth was over the little girl's face and a rope cut deep into the soft flesh of her neck. She lay in a cardboard box wrapped in newspapers.

At City Hospital Dr. Frank J. Delch, night superintendent, removed the newspapers from the tiny form. He cut the cord from her neck. Gently he opened the child's mouth, forcing the blue lips apart with his fingers. He began to blow air into her lungs, bending over the cold body on the operating table. He puffed rhythmically and called for other doctors. Soon there were eighteen in the room. Nurses who were off duty crowded in to witness what seemed a hopeless effort.

Dr. Delch became weary and another physician stepped into his place to act as an "artificial lung." Nurses joined in the battle and took their places in the long line.

For three hours they bent over the infant, trying to call back the breath of life. Some were weeping. Others were calmly desperate. At the end of the third hour the little limbs still were rigid. There was no encouraging increase in body warmth. But the face had turned from deep purple to a ruddy hue.

Suddenly there was a gasp from the group. The infant had squirmed. It began to cry. It was a weak cry, but increased in strength as grinning physicians patted the child's back. They hurried it to an incubator and tonight said it would be a healthy infant in a few days.

Deputy Police Superintendent James McDevitt said that if the person who abandoned the infant were found he or she would be charged with attempted murder.

Within the past eight days, he said, twelve babies have been abandoned in the South End near where today's victim was found. Of those found previously, he said, none is now alive.

ELY LAUDS CHINESE, BUT FORESEES LOSS

Says Attacks by Japanese Should Make Line Break Less Costly.

Editor's Note: Constant air bombing and artillery action by the Japanese probably will so wear down the Chinese defense finally that a break through the lines will be less costly, Maj. Gen. Hanson E. Ely, distinguished retired American military figure, believes. Following is another of a series by Maj. Gen. Ely in which he analyzes the Far Eastern developments.

By MAJ. GEN. HANSON E. ELY, U. S. A. Retired.

(Copyright, 1932, by the United Press.)

Reinforcements from Japan have arrived. At least two regiments of the Eleventh Japanese Division have landed, according to reliable reports, and the remainder of the division are hourly expected to land.

A Japanese division, peace strength, has two infantry brigades of two regiments each, an artillery regiment of 24 guns, a cavalry regiment of two squadrons, an engineer battalion and transport battalion, medical troops, &c.—about 9,000 men.

GEN. ELY.

Bombing by air and artillery continues. This will probably finally so wear down the Chinese defense that a break through will be less costly. An encircling movement is now going on in Chapei, next to the International Settlement. Heavy artillery is not used for fear of injuring foreigners. Both sides are very careful to avoid injury to foreigners as far as possible.

The Japanese are said to have landed some troops in the International Settlement notwithstanding the request of ambassadors to the contrary.

When combatants are joined in serious battle, the outcome is all important and they can not give that consideration to requests of outsiders that they otherwise might.

Several bombing and combat planes were sent to the Shanghai-Nanking Railway to hamper troop movements to reinforce the Chinese. Such railway bombing does not seem to have been very effective, but the uncontested control of the air gives Japan a tremendous advantage.

When one contestant has control of the sea and air without a contest, such an advantage in tanks, artillery leadership and training as to cause a three-to-one casualty list to its enemy, the latter may well lose its morale and think it has been betrayed by its country.

The Chinese have proved themselves brave and patriotic good fighters with machine guns, rifles, trench mortars and hand grenades, but China has been a superpacifist country and is now paying the price.

The Japanese now use flares to expose the Chinese night counter attacks which previously had some success. Now the Japanese artillery and air bombing is effective at night. These brilliant lights, suspended by parachutes, are dropped from airplanes and for several minutes light up the ground, enabling enemy movements or positions to be seen and artillery and air bombardment to be nearly as effective by night as by day.

BOMBARDMENT IS RENEWED AS JAPAN TAKES KIANGWAN

transports awaiting boats to bring the soldiers ashore. Unverified reports on the waterfront said twelve newly arrived troop ships lay outside Woosung, waiting to discharge their men.

The Fourteenth Japanese Division was believed nearby, although there was no evidence at 7:30 a. m. that they had begun landing.

Strength of 20,000 Each.

Japanese sources said the peacetime strength of the Eleventh and Fourteenth Divisions was 10,000 men each, while their war strength was 20,000 each. Whether the two outfits were coming on a peace or war footing, the Japanese would not say, but it seemed reasonable that they would come prepared to meet any emergency.

After the Japanese reinforcements from the transport Florida Maru came ashore they rested within the confines of the wharves, yards and warehouses, while additional military supplies were unloaded. Conspicuous among them were a number of airplanes.

The planes, unassembled and in boxes, were swung from the ship to waiting trucks and rushed to the nearby Japanese flying field along the border of the International Settlement, where the work of assembling them went forward rapidly.

Men Work Feverishly.

The mechanics worked feverishly. As soon as the ships were assembled they were sent aloft, tested, then rolled aside for additional planes to come.

A number of airplanes took off and began reconnoitering.

All the Japanese occupied at Kiangwan was a shamble of debris and dead bodies. The Chinese claimed the stench and not the Japanese had driven them out. They estimated that 1,600 deteriorating dead lay within the shattered mud walls.

The Japanese said evacuation had gone on for two days and the town had been stripped of everything of value, even to cooking utensils. They said it was a village of horror, with only 20 living refugees remaining.

DANISH SHIP'S CREW SAVED IN ROUGH SEA

none of the Elzey's crew was injured. The Acushnet had a small leak as the result of a broken plate.

The master of the Elzey is M. S. Kroger, of Staten Island. The reports to the Coast Guard did not reveal how many were in his crew.

Boatswain Egeland's report did not contain any details of the collision other than to state that the Elzey went down in 12 fathoms of water 20 minutes after the crash. A dense blanket of fog enshrouded the New England Coast yesterday.

The position of the sunken craft was given as three-quarters of a mile off the lightship. It was considered a menace to navigation by Egeland and the patrol boats Harriet Lane and the Jackson were sent to assist the Acushnet in towing the craft out of the sound channel. The Elzey's stern was protruding above the water.

Although the Acushnet makes its base at Woods Hole, Coast Guard officials here ordered it to proceed to Boston after the task of removing the Elzey has been completed. It was not expected to reach Boston until tomorrow.

League Inquiry Board Arrives at Yokohama

Tokyo, (Monday) Feb. 29 (A.P.).—The League of Nations commission, sent to investigate the Manchurian dispute between China and Japan, arrived at Yokohama on the liner President Coolidge today and immediately left for Tokyo by train.

Members of the party declined to discuss the situation in the Far East or the commission's plans before conferring with Japanese officials. The commission, made up of representatives of the United States, Great Britain, France, Germany and Italy, will remain in Japan until March 11, when it will sail from Kobe for Shanghai.

Memorial to Be Built By China for U. S. Flier

Shanghai, Monday, Feb. 29 (A.P.). The Chinese have definitely decided to erect a monument for Robert Short, American who was shot down and killed in an aerial battle with Japanese planes last week. It has not, however, been decided, it was learned today, whether the memorial will be in the form of a shrine or cenotaph.

The aviator's mother in Tacoma, Wash., was said to have requested that his body be sent home, but the Chinese are urging that she allow its burial in Shanghai, since they wished to give Short honors in the form of a military funeral and permanent recognition afterward.

RUSSIANS GRANT JAPANESE RIGHT TO USE OF RAILROAD

Eastern Railway, Japanese subjects residing there are in need of protection of Japanese troops. The troops are not intended to be sent to the Soviet frontier, but only to the region of Imienpo and certainly not beyond Hailin.

"The Japanese command respects the rights of the Soviet Union in northern Manchuria. The Japanese government requests the Soviet government to feel confident that the Japanese forces will not violate the interests and rights of the Soviet Union on the Chinese Eastern Railway.

"The only object of the dispatch of troops east of Harbin is to save Japanese subjects. The Japanese government requests permission of the government of the U. S. S. R. to transport trotops to Imienpo or Hailin at the utmost."

In granting permission for the troop movements, the Soviet official put two questions concerning the Portsmouth Treaty, with a request that they be conveyed to the Japanese government for reply, Russia holding to a belief that use of the Chinese Eastern Railway "for strategical objects" would be a violation of that treaty.

"The transportation of Japanese troops on the Chinese Eastern Railway is in certain contradiction to the treaty concluded at Peiping in 1926 between Soviet Russia and Japan, according to the Portsmouth Treaty continues in force," M. Karakhan said.

"However, in view of the Japanese government's reference to special conditions which prompted them to make this request to the Soviet government and particularly in view of the fact that the Chinese authorities in Manchuria and the Chinese part of the Chinese Eastern Railway board applied to the board for permission to transport Japanese troops on the eastern line of the railway, the Soviet government agrees by way of exception and temporary measures to instruct the Soviet representative on the railway's board to permit the transport of a limited number of Japanese from Harbin to the station of Imienpo or Hailin at the utmost.

"The Soviet government makes its agreement conditional on the assurance being given by the Japanese government that the rights and interests of Soviet Russia on the Chinese Eastern Railway will not in any circumstances be violated by the Japanese authorities in command."

The two questions concerning the Portsmouth Treaty, which Ambassador Hirota promised immediately to send to Tokyo, were:

"(1) Under article seven of the Portsmouth Treaty Russia and Japan undertook to operate railways in Manchuria only for commercial and industrial objects and for no strategical objects. Utilization of the Chinese Eastern Railway for strategical objects leads to violation of the Portsmouth Treaty. The Soviet government strictly observes this as it does other articles and asks if it can expect the Japanese government and command will also observe the seventh article of the Portsmouth Treaty in relation to the Chinese Eastern Railway.

"(2) When the Soviet government has verified information that lately Japanese troops have been massing near the Soviet Korean border, which is in contradiction to article two of the Portsmouth Treaty, the Soviet government would like to receive from the Japanese government an explanation in connection with this massing of troops."

A peace treaty was signed by Russia and Japan on August 23, 1905, following negotiations at Portsmouth, N. H., ending the Russo-Japanese War. Its main points provided that Russia cede the half of Saghalien, an island off the Asiatic coast, which was annexed in 1875, surrender her lease of Kwantung Peninsula and Port Arthur, evacuate Manchuria and recognize Japan's sphere of influence in Korea.

George Washington Essay Contest News

Mrs. Harriet Baughn Rigdon, Treasurer General of D. A. R., Lauds Post for Patriotic Enterprise; Theater to Reward Contestants.

"To honor George Washington is to proclaim one's self a true American" was the inspiring message that came to The Post Essay Editor yesterday in a communication from Mrs. Harriet Baughn Rigdon, treasurer general of the D. A. R., who has been observing the progress of The Post George Washington Essay Contest from her home in Wabash, Ind.

Mrs. Rigdon is one of the patriotic leaders of her State, as well as in the national circles of the D. A. R. In addition to this work she has been in many movements of educational endeavors and is well qualified therefore to pass upon the merits of an essay contest.

"In all the wonderful observance of the Bicentennial of Washington's birth," continued Mrs. Rigdon, "I have been struck by the absorbing interest taken in his career by young people. Truly, his is a story which would appeal to every heart, young or old. It is a story of high resolve, untiring industry and devotion to country and his fellow Americans.

"An amazing feature of Washington's life is that we become more and more aware of his great wisdom and statecraft as the decades roll by and national happenings point us ever anew back to the guiding hand of Washington for inspiration and courage.

"Washington was not ashamed to be whole-heartedly for his own country, first of all. No dream of international leadership troubled his soul. He knew that if the young republic was to flourish, it must be with 'friendship for all and entangling alliances with none.' Our destiny lay in the western world, he felt, and also that it was a large enough task for any nation to encompass.

"The Washington Post is to be commended most highly on its patriotic enterprise in inaugurating the George Washington essay contest in his name city," continued Mrs. Rigdon. "A newspaper can do much in this way to stimulate an abiding interest in such a lofty cause as that of commemorating the 200th anniversary of the birth of the greatest of Americans.

"I am glad to hear that so many students in public, private and parochial schools in Washington and nearby territory in Virginia and Maryland are participating in the contest. It is very generous of The Washington Post to offer $1,000 in cash prizes for the 108 winners in the contest. A reader of The Post daily, I shall read with pride and attention the winning essays when they are published."

A shout of delight was heard from the contestants, en masse and individually, yesterday when they learned of the big performance at the Rialto Theater on March 19, which is to be given in their honor, to reward them for their efforts in the contest, through the courtesy of the Rialto Theater management. Eager to secure their tickets for the big show an added number of essays were received yesterday. They will be published tomorrow, that is the names and the addresses of the senders of the essays.

Tickets for the performance will be mailed to all who have turned in essays for The Post George Washington Essay Contest up to the present time. Tickets will also be mailed to new entrants in the contest who live in or near Washington, as fast as their essays are received.

Other features besides the films will be on the program for the big show. Watch The Washington Post daily for details of the performance and for information about The Post contest.

By the end of this week the peak of essays is expected to be reached. Judging from the reports from schools it is apparent that most of these institutions are preparing to file their essays by that time.

Educational Leader Tells Work of Teacher

"The fortunate teacher is the one who sees the community as her family and extends to them gladly the same help and encouragement which she gives to the members of her family," Miss Ann C. Woodward, chairman of the committee on international relations of the National Education Association, said in a radio talk last night from Station WRC.

Miss Wodward cited figures to show to what extent teachers have contributed to charity and to the feeding and clothing of children. "No other class of people have a greater sense of obligation toward the common good than do the teachers of this country," said Miss Woodward.

North Carolina U. Alumni to Meet

Frank P. Graham, Head of School, to Speak at Gathering Tonight.

Alumni of the University of North Carolina will hear an address by Frank P. Graham, president of that institution, in their annual meeting tonight at the Hamilton Hotel. The meeting will begin with an informal dinner at 7 o'clock. Members of the North Carolina delegation in Congress and other North Carolinians in the city will attend also.

Arthur Arrington, president of the Washington alumni, will preside at the meeting, while Representative Lindsay Warren will act as toastmaster. Senator Cameron Morrison, former Governor of North Carolina and a trustee of the university, also will speak.

2 DAYS

IN INTRODUCING NEW THRIFTY SERVICE to Washington housewives, we feel, with pardonable pride, that it is the solution of the household laundry problem in a semi-finished service, and we have endeavored to make it outstanding in every respect.

An addition to our present plant was acquired with a floor space of 60,000 square feet, and this new plant was thoroughly equipped with wash wheels, extractors and ironers. A new personnel properly trained to the exacting standards of this service, was instructed in the new laundering process using approved formulas of the Laundry Owners National Association. There is no guess work in this laundering process which is carried out under the most sanitary conditions using the latest scientific methods and best of materials.

NEW THRIFTY SERVICE changes the ordinary conception of this class of work, for in addition to completely finishing the flat work, Home Laundry offers five new features which will relieve the housewife of the heavy part of laundry work, giving her a bundle all finished with the exception of the ironing of the wearing apparel which is properly starched and ready for immediate ironing. All of these features are offered at no extra cost. If desired, shirts and other items of wearing apparel may be completely finished at a small additional charge. This means a real saving of more than two hours each week of the housewife's time and the price of this service makes it false economy to do without it.

BRIDGE TROPHY WON BY 'FOUR HORSEMEN'

Sims Team Takes Eastern Championship, Beating Culbertson Players.

New York, Feb. 28 (A.P.).—P. Hal Sims and his famous "Horsemen" of contract bridge added another prized trophy to their collection of silverware tonight—the Curt H. Reisinger cup for the Eastern team-of-four championship.

They defeated Mrs. Ely Culbertson and her "Bridge World" team in a grueling final match today. Their net plus was 2,965 points.

The run of the cards left plenty of room for alibis—and claims of prowess. Distribution throughout the match was extraordinary. A majority of the 40 hands held game and many held slams, a situation that always paves the way for high scoring and heavy ets.

Sims Compliments Team.

Sims, himself, his hair touseled as he lugged the heavy cup into a room where photographers waited for him and his teammates, Oswald Jacoby, Willard S. Karn and David Burnstine, had a simple explanation.

"The boys played beautifully," he said, "all of them. That's about all I can say."

Mrs. Culbertson and her team, Baron Waldemar von Zedtwitz, Theodore A. Lightner and M. J. Gottlieb, had no excuses, though admitting they had a number of bad breaks. It was a good match, they said, and well played.

The match was the last of the Eastern championships played at the Hotel Roosevelt last week. To reach the finals the Sims and Culbertson teams eliminated 22 others representing the pick of Eastern experts.

Lenz and Liggett Win.

Another major event, the Julian Goldman Pair Championship, was decided Friday night, when the veterans, Sidney Lenz and Commander Winfield Liggett, jr., came from behind to win.

So far as "rival" bridge systems are concerned, the Reisinger finals today had little significance. The "Horsemen" have their own "one-over-one" style of bidding, while the Bridge World Team played "Culbertson" with a one-over-one variation of its own. While not identical, each system is based on the approach-forcing principle.

MOSES SAYS GARNER MAKES HIS BID FOR WHITE HOUSE

him as feeling that he should not participate in a "political issue in one of the cities of the State" since he was charged with the duty of presiding as chief magistrate in the proceedings leading to the removal of Sheriff Thomas M. Farley, Tammany Hall district leader.

Senator Moses in his statement again predicted Mr. Hoover's renomination and reelection.

"Recalling the vigor with which Speaker Garner once commented upon the action of the Supreme Court in the estate tax case," he said: "I marvel at the moderation with which Mr. Garner has now begun his formal campaign for the Presidency with the single and simple assertion that President Hoover brought on a panic.

Additional Charges Suggested.

"In order to run true to form, the Speaker should have added the charge that the President brought on the World War, loaned billions to Europe during a Democratic administration, directed riotous expenditures for armaments in foreign countries, brought about the unbalanced budgets of other governments, made added loans in Latin-America, is responsible for bolshevism in Russia, engineered the eighteen revolutions in as many countries, caused the panic in Germany, and the economic collapse in central Europe, forced England off the gold standard, fomented the Sino-Japanese row, created the drought, and is responsible for the overproduction of coffee in Brazil, copper in Africa, sugar in Cuba, rubber in India, cotton in the South, and wheat in Canada, Australia and the Argentine.

Predicts Hoover Success.

"Doubtless these and other charges against Mr. Hoover will be formulated by the Speaker as he advances in his campaign for the Presidency and as soon as he determines the more pressing question whether he is running as wet or dry.

"In about eight months from now Speaker Garner will be able to formulate another charge against the President; namely, that Mr. Hoover has retained the confidence of the American people and has brought about his own reelection."

Speaker Garner, in his formal statement, said:

"Senator Moses' statement covers considerable territory. It would indicate that to this he has given about the same amount of thought as to his famous remark when he referred to the Republican senators from the West as 'sons of the wild jackass.'

"In fact, the senator's statement will be, as usual, quite amusing to the reactionary element in the Republican party."

Carrying on the week-end political debate, Senator Connally said:

"With President Hoover begging the Democrats to cooperate in effecting panic relief legislation, which in itself is a confession that he can not command the support of his own party in Congress, it is rather dazzling to have his spokesmen claiming credit for him for the Democratic enactments."

"Reprisals" Not Planned.

"Fortunately for the country," the Texan added, "this cheap begging for applause where no credit is due will not inspire Democratic reprisal. The Democrats are more concerned with doing what is possible to help the country than to reap any other advantage from this course than is involved in public appreciation of their actions and their attitude."

Connally declared if Mr. Hoover had all the "remedies" already enacted and awaiting decision in mind, "why should he have waited more than two years during the progress of the panic to enunciate them?"

"Up to very recently," Connally said, "he had huge majorities in both Houses of Congress. He could have had enacted the Finance Reconstruction Corporation, the Glass-Steagall bill, the tax revision, and all the rest of them, at any time during this period and not have held them back until the Democrats became the preponderant force in Congress."

Holds Bill Railroaded.

Secretary Hyde's statement said:

"Yesterday the Democratic organization in the House railroaded through a bill for $132,000,000 for roads. The bill was produced on Friday and pushed through under very stringent rules on Saturday. A bare 24 hours' notice was given. No consultation was held with the Treasury which must propose methods of taxation to meet the expenditure. No advice was sought from the ways and means committee as to how they are to meet so large an increase in expenditure and balance the budget.

"The bill was passed in entire disregard of the assurances given some weeks ago to the country by the Democratic leadership in the House that they would oppose all authorization bills, and after they had severely trimmed the budget recommendations for funds for departmental services. From the regular road appropriations for this department, for instance, they deducted, with the great parade of economy, the sum of $10,000,000. They now propose to spend $132,000,000 for the same purposes. At a time when the country is crying for economies of administration and expenditure they pass a bill which requires more expenditures than all of the economies which have painfully and laboriously been achieved by the appropriations committee.

"The bill purports to be a bill for the relief of agriculture and of unemployment. So far as agriculture is concerned an expenditure of a maximum of $200,000,000 for crop production loans has already been passed. I should like to call attention, also, to the fact that, as to the $122,000,000 road bill, the farmer will gain in only part of the fund and will be compelled to pay, directly and indirectly, a considerable portion of the additional taxes which the bill will necessitate. * * *

Future Work Menaced.

"An excessive increase in road expenditures from the Federal Treasury this year would undoubtedly endanger the stable development of the Federal aid program in the future. Excessive emergency support of Federal aid in some years will probably result in insufficient support in other years, and thus impair the whole program. That would be disastrous. An assured annual program is much more important to the proper development of our highway system than any possible emergency and artificial stimulus which is of necessity temporary in its nature.

"The $132,000,000 provided by this bill will give, directly and in itself, employment to about 35,000 people. This out of 6,000,000 unemployed. True it will create some indirect employment, but the number so benefited will certainly be less than the number directly affected. By extracting $132,000,000 additional funds from agriculture and industry, we shall impose still further strain upon the country and shall deprive more people of employment indirectly than we can employ directly. * * *

"If there is to be economy in public expenditures and relief from burdens of taxation upon the people economy must begin. The President has forcefully said, 'We can not squander ourselves into prosperity.' The bill ought not to be enacted."

New York, Feb. 28 (A.P.).—Declaring Samuel Seabury's "hat is in the ring" for Vice President, State Senator John J. Dunnigan, Democratic member of the Hofstadter investigating committee, today called for the committee counsel's resignation "in justice to the people of the State."

WASHINGTON'S LIFE IS TOLD BY STUDENTS

Bicentennial Program Held at Georgetown Preparatory School.

The story of Washington's life, in its four phases—as a youth, soldier, statesman and American—was told by the students of Georgetown Preparatory School, at an academy held yesterday at the school in Garrett Park, Md. Circuit Court Judge Robert B. Peter, of Montgomery County, was the honored guest.

In an address, Judge Peter outlined the advantage of living close to Washington as a means to acquaint the students with both the history of George Washington and the history of the country. Judge Peter also emphasized the intense interest which Washington always showed in education and educational institutions.

Judge Peter was introduced by the Rev. Robert S. Lloyd, headmaster of the school. The addresses of the students were heard by the Rev. W. Coleman Nevils, president of Georgetown University. The meeting was opened by Charles G. Zubrod, of the class of '32, the chairman.

Tell Story of Life.

Frank Martin Foley outlined the story of Washington's family from the year 1183, and told of the migration of his ancestors to this country and many incidents of his youth.

The thread of the story of Washington's life was picked up by Edward O'Gorman, who told of Washington's career as a soldier and related his experiences during the French and Indian Wars and the Revolution, ending with his victory at Yorktown.

The story of Washington's statesmanship and his record of public office was told by Stephen B. Elkins, who traced his record of statecraft from his participation in the House of Burgesses to his activities in 1787, when he presided over the Federal convention in Philadelphia which met to revise the Articles of Confederation.

21ST BIRTHDAY

REAR ADMIRAL C. M. CHESTER.

(Associated Press.)

The Navy's mathematical genius, who 23 years ago took a pencil and scrap of paper and punctured the claims of Dr. Frederick A. Cook to having discovered the North Pole, today will celebrate his twenty-first birthday.

Rear Admiral Colby Mitchell Chester, retired, has seen 88 years pass, but has so far celebrated only 20 birthdays. He was born February 29, 1844, at New London, Conn. He is the second oldest living graduate of Annapolis Naval Academy.

The admiral missed a birthday in 1900 because it was not a leap year. After the Gregorian calendar was changed there was still a slight error. Years divisible by 100 but not by 400 are not leap years.

It was his exacting calculations in 1909 which first cast doubt on all of Dr. Cook's claims to having discovered the North Pole.

RISING PRICES.

Why is it that during the past year, even in the business of retail foodstuffs, with stocks depleted and sales maintaining more or less an even volume, merchants have ordered in minimum quantities? Why do they let their shelves remain half empty? The answer is readily given by the dealers themselves—falling prices. The retailer could not afford to stock up for a six months' supply when he faced the possibility that wholesale prices would drop, forcing him to sell at a loss.

Declining prices have benefited the retail purchaser immensely. In many lines of household economy a dollar goes almost twice as far as it did. The dealer, on the other hand, handles his usual turnover for an income at least 25 per cent less, with profits correspondingly less. This is a condition which, naturally, extends through the distributing agencies to the manufacturers and slows down production of all kinds.

All elements of trade are keenly watching the basic prices of commodities. That they have maintained an even level now for some months, with more recent indications of improvement, is encouraging. As soon as an upward trend is definitely established buying will be resumed in quantity again. The retailer does not enjoy the added work of having to replenish his supplies every few weeks, but he has been compelled to do so as a matter of self-protection. With rising prices he is safe in placing larger orders. Then if he has not disposed of stock during the interim between orders the new and higher prices are all to his advantage instead of meaning a loss.

This elementary explanation shows how it is possible for business to recover so promptly after a depression. Every panic period in the United States has been followed by a quick flood of business. The answer is simple when the merchant's problem of self-protection is examined. There are many indications that this country is on the eve of another era of better prices, and that a sharp upturn of business will immediately follow.

THE CITY DIRECTORY.

A city directory may well be considered a joy to the idle philosopher. It is a ponderous document of authentic human values. It is a portrait of the community, from which genealogists, historians and sociologists may extract data representing the civilization of the age. The 1932 edition of the City Directory of Washington has just appeared, and it seems to meet all the requirements of bota dilettante and specialist.

The first name listed is that of Mildred Aaberg; the last that of Albert J. Zynoloski. Between them marches the whole human pageant of the Nation's Capital. They stand at the extreme fore and aft of the big parade of human nature in the District of Columbia.

Thousands of names and thousands of interests go to constitute the roster. Now and again mass production is evident. For instance, there is the Smith clan, occupying 35 columns. And there are 29 columns of Browns and Brownes; more than 23 columns of Joneses, 13 columns of Greens and Greenes, 7 columns of Grays and Greys, about 2 columns of Blacks, 11 columns of Whites and one single individual Light-brown.

There are 258 Stones and 555 Woods, 35 Cottons and 16 Wools, 2 Flowers and 19 Weeds. An entire column of Loves is listed, and 36 Darlings. Three Faiths, 27 Hopes and 6 Charitys recall the classic trio of virtues. There are 10 Christmases.

One Town is included, 2 Towns, 3 Towers, 3 Towerses, 30 Castles, 30 Temples, 48 Churches and 38 Bridges.

George Washington has 29 namesakes in the directory. Andrew Jackson has 13; John Adams, 8; John Q. Adams, 3; James Buchanan, 6; Robert E. Lee, 10; George Dewey, 1. There are 6 Henry Fords and 3 Woodrow Wilsons. Eight Coolidges are listed and more than a column of Hardings. There are 134 Hoovers, one family of that name residing, it seems, in the White House. Three Charles Curtises appear. The names of James E. Freeman and James J. Davis are present 3 times. There is 1 John Paul Jones and 1 Alexander Hamilton; also 1 Isaac Newton and 2 Herbert Spencers.

Trade names are numerous, such as Archer, Fowler, Hunter, Cooper, Hooper, Taylor, Mason, Baker, Farmer, Carpenter, Turner, Shepherd, &c. Professional names, too, are common, including King, Prince, Bishop, &c. Place names, like Hill, Vale, Dell, Shore, North, South, East, West, &c., are frequent. It is manifest that many families derive their names from the occupations or residences of their ancestors.

Hours might be spent in pursuit of curious and interesting cognomens in the pages of this roll call of the city's people. But doubtless the average person will be content merely to ascertain whether or not his own name is correctly entered. "Men are egotists."

THE BANKRUPTCY RACKET.

Bankruptcy in the United States has become a racket. Instead of serving as a medium to relieve honest debtors of insupportable burdens, the bankruptcy laws enable swindlers to prey upon the public. Lloyd K. Garrison, special assistant to the Solicitor General, who made an extensive investigation into bankruptcy, estimates that creditors have lost more than $3,000,000,000 through this means during the last five years.

President Hoover points out that the ever-increasing army of bankrupts is not an outgrowth of the depression. From 1921 to 1928, while the country was steadily gaining in prosperity, the annual loss to creditors mounted from $144,000,000 to $740,000,000. During the depression years the increase in bankruptcy loot has been considerably less than normal.

Solicitor General Thacher described the bankruptcy courts as "a dumping ground for the refuse of commercial wreckage and a sanctuary where debtors obtain cancellation of their debts regardless of how they may have wasted their property." So long as credit is obtainable an individual may indulge in every extravagance, and then secure a legal release of responsibility for his debts. In some cases prodigals make their way through life by acquiring debts and going through bankruptcy. It is a shameful blot upon American jurisprudence that the antiquated laws which make this practice possible have remained uncorrected for so long.

In view of the enormous swindles which bankrupts perpetrate upon American business firms and individuals, President Hoover's recommendations may be considered an important part of his relief program. A drain of nearly $1,000,000,000 per year on the profits of business must be an important factor in the current slump. Business men quake at an increase of a few hundred million dollars in taxes. But here is a loss equal to nearly one-fourth of the entire Federal budget. The money which the law gives to bankrupts would more than support the Army and Navy, and is almost equal to the vast expenditures of the Government for veterans' relief.

Suppression of this legal piracy will be a substantial encouragement to business. The demoralization of debtors by laws that tempt them to become dishonest has gone much too far. In addition to reducing a heavy drain upon business profits, the recommendations to be submitted by President Hoover should make a notable contribution to moral improvement in this field.

TRUCK AND BUS PROBLEMS.

The proper method of taxing and regulating trucks and buses has become an important question affecting railroad transportation. As is the case in innovations, there is confusion as to facts and remedies. With a view to securing comprehensive and exact facts regarding this important new element in transportation the Interstate Commerce Commission is holding hearings.

Three-fourths of the States have passed or are considering regulatory laws, while the commission's deliberations, naturally, are undertaken to determine the advisability of Federal regulation of all interstate carriers. At first glance the question does not appear to be much more difficult than the regulation of railways, but there are many differences in the two methods of transportation. Fifteen systems control 85 per cent of all rail operation, but of the 3,490,000 trucks, 2,500,000 are owned by individuals, and only 300,000 individuals own more than one truck.

The National Automobile Chamber of Commerce is taking an active part in the commission hearings, presenting figures regarding highway transportation which in many cases are surprising. Truck owners, it is claimed, are already paying their full share of the cost of the highways they use. Trucks that represent 13 per cent of the total number of motor vehicles pay 27 per cent of all special motor taxes. It is asserted that less than 2 per cent of the total number of trucks are engaged in interstate operations.

Bus regulation is a much easier problem to solve, since buses handle only passengers, and have fixed routes, terminals and schedules. They constitute in reality a system of transportation and are preeminently common carriers. It is conceded that the 90,000 buses should be regulated.

THE TURKISH KORAN.

In the interest of national reform the President of Turkey, Ghazi Mustapha Kemal, has ordered a translation of the Koran to be used in religious services. At the last celebration of Ramadan, the most important Mohammedan fast, the Koran was read at the Aya Sophia Mosque, the former church of St. Sophia in Istanbul. Never before had the service been read in anything but the traditional Arabic, tongue of the prophet. A few years ago such an innovation would have been impossible, and even today it is regarded by many devout Mohammedans as sacrilege.

This reform, however, is but another of the Turkish president's blows against established custom. More radical than this last measure was his ruling which substituted for the sheriat—religious law—the national law. He abrogated the sultanate and the caliphate in so far as they applied to Turkey, abolished the fez and the yashmak, separated secular and religious affairs and prohibited Islamic religious orders.

At the first reading of the Koran in Turkish it is estimated that 20,000 crowded into the famous mosque. Other mosques will follow the custom, for they must obey the order of the Ghazi, who goes so far as to tell the preachers what they should discourse on, for he permits nothing to stand in the path of his drive for national solidarity. The followers of Mohammed had respected the decree of the Moslem faith against translating the scriptures. Unbelievers, however, had already produced foreign versions of the book. George Sale made a good English translation, while French and German versions are also available.

In discussing the Turkish translation a sheik of El Azhar at Cairo, the most important Moslem university, stated that he did not believe the spirit of the Koran could be rendered in any language other than Arabic. Mohammedan scholars, the sheik said, have made changes in the order of the prophet's writings and incorporated discoveries, but the original text has remained inviolate. The Moslem child learns the sayings of Mohammed with his first words, and in the school the Koran is given a place which no other religious work has attained. Often it is the only book the Mohammedan child knows, and though he learns it by rote, he knows the form of every verse and its place in the Koran. There are more than 200,000,000 Mohammedans in the world, which makes the Koran possibly the most read book. It is the opinion of Mustapha Kemal, however, that aside from the nationalistic value of translating the Koran there will be a gain in understanding and interpreting the sacred work.

OVERTAXING TRAVELERS.

Last week the House passed a bill increasing the fee for passports from $6 to $10, thus adding another burden to the traveling public. Apparently the only reason for this action was a desire to make American travelers pay the entire cost of maintaining the foreign service of the State Department. Since this service benefits the farmer, the banker and the country in general, there seems to be no reason why travelers should pay its entire cost.

Heavy taxes are already levied upon Americans who visit foreign countries. A revenue tax of $5 is collected on trans-atlantic steamship tickets. If this additional fee should be approved, and the renewal privileges curtailed as provided by the House bill, the tax on tickets to Europe will amount to approximately 15 per cent.

It would be short-sighted policy for Congress to lay excessive taxes on travel, especially when the Government is spending vast sums to develop a merchant marine. Shipping is already demoralized by the reduced demand for passenger facilities. In this period of hard times Congress ought not to strike the merchant marine another blow. The proposed extra fee on passports is not large, but it may be sufficient to discourage many Americans from traveling abroad during this period of hard times.

The present scheme of preparedness as followed in Europe is to keep enough guns at hand to be able to lick your debtors.

Senator Tydings says that the United States is financing the armies of the world. Of course, he means all except our own.

A London woman has married the man she shot in 1927. She was determined to get him one way or another.

American people spend $1,500,000,000 a year for amusement. This does not include international conferences.

We admire confidence, but the Democratic proposal to reorganize the Government does seem a bit premature.

The return of 4 per cent beer seems doubtful, but the people can cheer up on a 2 per cent sales tax.

TRENCHES FOR DEFENSE

From the New York Times.

The check to Japan's army at Shanghai, even if it turns out to be merely temporary, has been emphatic enough to create something like a military sensation. Preconceived notions about the relative fighting merits of the Japanese and the Chinese soldier are upset. The fighting reputation of Asiatic races, with the exception of the Japanese and the nomad tribes of the North, who have repeatedly invaded and conquered Europe, has been low. Most people have persisted in thinking of China as in the tradition of Darius, of Persia's vast armies crumbling before a handful of Macedonians, or India at the mercy of comparatively small bands of invaders. Obviously, there is better mettle in the Cantonese army which has been holding the trenches around Shanghai, or else it has been proved again that military efficiency is largely a matter of training and leadership.

Beyond the situation in the Far East, however, people must have been thinking about the effect of the Shanghai fighting on war philosophy and war moods everywhere. Does the lesson of Shanghai represent a gain for peace or for war? The first impression is for peace. It has been shown that an offensive can be brought to a standstill by an army not much superior in numbers and greatly inferior in equipment and war material, but taking advantage of the defensive potentialities of trench and machine-gun nests, as developed in the World War. When the attacker has reason to watch his step, when the defense develops new potentialities, it would seem fair to conclude that the chances of war are lessened. The would-be aggressor is more cautious and the defense is less panicky. On the other hand, it might be argued that an aggressor, aware of the potency of trench defense, will be all the more eager to get the jump on the other fellow. He will rush the enemy's territory, dig in on foreign soil and thus transfer to himself the advantages of defensive warfare.

That, of course, is the story of the Germans in France during more than four years after the first battle of the Marne. It was the thought in the minds of the French generals, who at Versailles demanded the left bank of the Rhine; they were determined that "the next war" should be fought on German soil. Nevertheless, in the long run the advantages of the trench would be on the side of the nation standing on the defensive. The bitter grapple may be staged on its soil, but no matter where the attacker is delayed, his plans crash if he can not attain a swift decision. This is what happened in the World War, and on a vastly smaller scale it looks as if it may happen at Shanghai.

POST HASTE.

All you can ask, if you get sick, is that some one will take half as much interest in your recovery as is being shown for N'Gi, the gorilla.

Some papers are printing the fact that Alfred E. Smith is still a wet, as though that were a matter of news.

Neither is it surprising that the astute Mr. Smith realizes that before election the attempt to make political capital of the depression may readily become a boomerang.

Phoenix-like Chapei surely has been burned down at least seventeen times according to the Shanghai reports, and it would seem that Kiangwan must be solidly paved with shells.

Japan has not declared war on China, and the nations of the world have taken no organized action against Japan, but just as surely as Japan is assaulting Shanghai the financial and economic attack on Tokyo is having telling effect.

The relief bill is signed, sealed and delivered, and this morning the Federal Reserve can expand its chest and its war chest for the attack on credit restriction.

Lake Worth, Fla., is the first town to announce that the new baby bonds will circulate there as currency. Since the lowest denomination is to be $50, the slogan will be, "Keep the change."

Japanese insistence that the defenders of a besieged city shall be the ones to retire if a truce is established, is one of the novel innovations of the present war that is not a war.

One can't help wondering how the rough-and-ready Garner repartee would dignify an executive document.

Five hundred Canadian war birds want to join the Chinese forces at Shanghai, and since the conflict there is not a war they claim their participation in the military exercise would not be a breach of neutrality.

League nations will probably find the American plan the simpler way; not officially to boycott Japan's exports of silk or her imports of cotton, but merely the fruits of military victory.

The Far Eastern fight shows that world sympathy is still with the under dog, even if he is a great Dane being abused by a fox terrier.

Another political secret is out. If Sam Seabury enters the race, it probably will be as an anti-Tammany candidate.

One observer remarks that the American recovery campaign is at the second battle of the Marne. Let's make the battle-cry: "Dividends, they shall not pass!"

FEBRUARY TWENTY-NINE.

"I've lived for forty years," said he,
"And yet I'm only ten.
No second birthday came to me."
Said I: "Say that again!"
And solemnly he said to me:
"I never have been twenty-three!

"I have been four years old, I know,
But never five or six,
Though birthdays yearly come and go,
I'm in a curious fix.
I had to leap from four to eight
Without a chance to celebrate.

"One birthday in the 'teens I had,
The sixteenth, I recall,
Then jumped to twenty, though my dad
Had known them one and all.
I'm forty on this very date,
But never have been thirty-eight."

Said I: "I think it very queer.
Can you explain to men
How you have reached your foreieth year
By birthdays only ten?"
He answered, "Here's my natal line:
Born, February twenty-nine."

As Malady Remains Uncured, Temptation to Consult Quacks Grows

By ROBERT QUILLEN

A "concession" is a right to sell goods, and the money paid for it is a private license tax.

Why do merchants pay the tax without complaining? Because it gives them access to an unusual market. It enables them to offer their goods to people who have money to spend.

The prosperity of any business depends on the prosperity of its prospective customers. And business men, as you see, are willing to pay an extra tax in order to reach customers who are prosperous.

That being true, why should business men object to a tax that would insure the prosperity of all customers?

If Big Business, by paying an extra tax, can rid America of poverty, it can by so doing increase the number of its customers and its profits and thus make the tax an investment that pays certain dividends.

Dire poverty is a disgrace to a civilized nation. Its existence is proof that men have not yet found a way to solve the fundamental problem of existence.

It is not a difficult problem. Its solution requires nothing more than insurance for the jobless and pensions for the aged and unfit.

Thus far the solution has been blocked by selfishness and fear. Rich and powerful men, already taxed almost beyond endurance, regard industrial insurance and old-age pensions as new attacks on their purses.

But any tax that eliminates poverty is an investment in new customers.

If tax money is taken from the pockets of Big Business and paid to the jobless and the destitute, it creates a new demand for goods and quickly returns to the pockets from which it came.

Where is the greater profit to be made? In a land where many are destitute, or in a land where all have money?

And which is better for the community—to pay an old man a pension of $30 a month, or to support him in a State institution at a cost of $30 a month?

Russia is trying to solve the problem in one way. Surely America has brains enough to find a solution less offensive to American standards and ideals.

PRO AND CON

Democratic Folly.

Detroit News.

With the largest measures in the Hoover program for economic relief enacted, a result brought about by their cooperation, the Democrats in Congress would be expected to give more thought to national politics. The big reconstruction bills are called the "Hoover bills" and, in fact, are largely the President's. Old-line Republicans, like Watson, of Indiana, at once make the most of it. So gall burns in Democratic breasts. Goads spur up Democratic restiveness. The Washington correspondents think the party truce, which thus far in the main has dominated Congress, may be called off.

That kind of gall is poison and the goads of low partisanship, we submit, can spur the Democratic mule into disaster only. What sort of spectacle would the Democrats now present if they had pursued the negative, obstructionist course toward administration measures calculated to help restore good employment and business conditions?

The obvious demand of the times is for constructive deeds by the available political instrumentalities, and these, chiefly, are the Republican and Democratic parties. If difficult to carry out, the political opportunity before the Democrats is simply stated. What constructive work can they add to Hoover's, to which their Republican brethren are averse or opposed?

Results First, Please!

Kansas City Times.

Speaker Garner and the Republican stump orators, whose recriminations threaten to terminate the political truce by which the country had hoped the emerency economic legislation now required would get speedy action, should waive the question of credit for the result until the result is assured.

One thing is certain, and that is that neither the administration nor the Democrats will get any credit if the house burns down while they are quarreling over which of them shall have the honor of dashing through the flames and fetching out the baby. The country is less concerned about the credit than it is about the accomplishment of the rescue.

A Dangerous Proposal.

Cincinnati Enquirer.

The House bill to consolidate the War and Navy Departments suggests a "neither pig nor pup" procedure. What influence really is back of this bill? Is it a measure looking simply to economic retrenchment? Whatever the answer to these questions might be, it ought to be evident to any thoughtful mind that the bill is possibly a dangerous one in that it seems to menace the adequacy of the national defense.

The Government desires to economize. How strong is this desire? Prohibition just now complacently contemplates undiminished appropriation for the enforcement of sumptuary decree. The indirect cost and loss of this bureaucratic barnacle is enough to wipe out the national deficit. But the eighteenth amendment is more sacrosanct in the minds of many than the integrity of the national defense, the ultimate material and moral welfare of the country.

Hoover, the Liberals and Public Works.

Topeka Capital.

Is Hoover by this time numbered among the liberals, or the Old Guard? He appointed a Democrat and a Jew on the Supreme Court, which gave the liberals huge delight. Also he has for more than two years stood stubbornly opposed to wage reductions, even against the force of economic laws. He has not agreed with the bankers that deflation is not objectionable, and that inflation is radicalism.

But the liberals have selected a single issue and on that they have condemned him. It is the proposal that the Federal Treasury assume the burden of unemployment relief. Hoover and the majority of Congress are against it at this time and the La Follette bill was defeated 48 to 35 in the Senate, without going to the House, which, however, was even more strongly opposed. The Federal Government is not ready to take over unemployment relief at the cost of the Treasury.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

Pinchot Would Wreck Republican Party; Democrats Have No Plan for Ending Depression.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Just as the President had, with the aid of a reluctant Congress, succeeded in restoring a large measure of confidence in the minds of the people, who have begun to realize that he is capable of real leadership and should be renominated and elected again this year, Gov. Pinchot, better known as a pork-barrel statesman, is reported as trying to convince the Republican Progressives (?) that it is their duty to stop Hoover at the convention and try to nominate one of their number (preferably Pinchot). Failing in this, the report goes on to say, Pinchot will attempt to stage a split in the Republican ranks. Yet he knows that a split in his party would mean certain victory for the Democratic party.

A Democratic victory this year would be in the nature of a calamity, for a Democratic administration would attempt to force free trade on the Nation, which would result in Europe dumping her products made by cheap labor on our shores, in competition with our home industries. This would result in low wages for all classes of labor and a lower standard of living for the American people, not counting the millions added to the ranks of unemployed.

Pinchot in trying to injure Hoover politically fails to take these conditions into account. Rule or ruin seems to be his motto. Yet he claims to be a Republican. Here is my remedy for restoring prosperity, though a lot of hard-shelled Democrats do not agree with me: Elect a Republican President and a safe majority of regular Republicans to both houses of Congress. Then American industry and labor will be free of the fear of free trade. People who are now hoarding money will put it in circulation again. Then we will have prosperity of the Coolidge brand. If any Democrat can think up a better plan I should like to hear of it. So far the Democrats have had to follow the leadership of Hoover during the present session of Congress, for they have had no program of their own acceptable to the people.

"Federalist" Praises Post Essay Contest as a Means of Inculcating Patriotism in Oncoming Citizens.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Having before now had a word to say on the thesis that to teach citizenship is the all-inclusive responsibility of the schools of the country, I hope you will spare me space to commend your George Washington Essay Contest in that connection.

That thorough instruction in the three R's is necessary in the making of a citizen is accepted as a matter of course. In adding to this foundation, the modern inclination to overload the student with diversified knowledge should be held in check. Only as much general culture and such special studies should be superimposed as the developing adolescent mind can beneficially retain. This is the substantial basis of citizenship without reference to the country in which the student is born.

While a basis of mental training is essential in the development of citizenship, that which vitalizes it is love of country—patriotism. And these theorists who assume that patriots everywhere, including the United States, are necessarily mercenary and truculent, and that to teach patriotism is therefore inconsistent with good will to mankind, seem sadly handicapped by lack of common sense.

Yet this exotic fallacy catches a willing ear here and there, and as a check against it The Post George Washington Essay Contest is especially welcome. The children who take part and become interested therein will learn the meaning of citizenship at its patriotic best. Therefrom they will visualize the New World patriot, free from narrow, sordid, and chauvinistic predilections.

In other words, the contest will give them a lasting impression of American ideals as typified in Washington's personality, so that we need have little fear that they will ever be misled by visionaries who follow the false god of internationalism.

FEDERALIST.

Limit Franking Privilege and Prevent Nepotism, Says Citizen, in Urging Economy Measures.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Congress has refused to consider reduction of salaries as a means of economy. But there are other measures of economy that might be adopted. A year ago a member of the House exposed nepotism, showing that many relatives of representatives who are on the pay roll render no service to the Government. Was the evil remedied or was the pressure too strong?

There is a heavy deficiency in the postal department. But nothing could be more unwise than an increase in postage. Intercommunication and better understanding are essential to the life of the republic. Why not act upon the suggestions repeatedly made to have the various departments pay their proportionate share of the postal bill, and to limit the franking privileges of members of Congress?

2 COUNTIES PROTEST DELAY ON ROAD PLEA

ARLINGTON COUNTY BUREAU OF THE POST.
Tel. Clar. 509. Clarendon, Va.

Protesting the action of Delegate Hugh Reid, member of the General Assembly from Arlington County, in failing to introduce a bill asking for the appropriation of $25,000 to aid the development of the George Washington Memorial Parkway, Hugh Lee Kirby, of Arlington County, made public a copy of a petition which was being widely circulated last night throughout the City of Alexandria, Fairfax and Arlington Counties. Mr. Kirby reported last night that it is being readily signed.

It reads as follows:

"We the undersigned taxpayers and citizens of Arlington and Fairfax Counties and of the City of Alexandria, District of Northern Virginia, do hereby petition and urgently request the General Assembly of the Commonwealth of Virginia, now in session, at Richmond, to ratify the Capper-Cramton act, now known as Public 284, creating the George Washington Memorial Parkway, to run from Mount Vernon and Fort Washington on both sides of the Potomac River to Great Falls and to appropriate the sum of $25,000 as submitted to you by the State budget committee and personally urged by his excellency, the Governor, Hon. John Garland Pollard, in his message to your honorable body on the convening of same in January and to annul any act or proposed act contrary thereto."

In a statement given out by Mr. Kirby yesterday he says:

"Our form of government provides an orderly way to proceed in our courts wherever a controversy arises or a dispute over a boundary line, and this is just what the National Capital Park and Planning Commission has done, and it appears that our delegate to the General Assembly proposes, in effect, that the State of Virginia shall boycott the entire Federal Government.

"Suppose, for instance, that our Federal Government boycotted the entire State of Virginia and had refused to advance money for Government aid roads, the money for the Memorial Bridge, the Memorial Highway to Mount Vernon, the Wakefield Memorial, Williamsburg and Yorktown, and right now we are asking Congress for $5,000,000 to build roads to get our farmers out of the mud, and, notwithstanding all this, and other important things that are too numerous to mention in this hasty statement, the Federal Government has appropriated $7,500,000 and further provided that Virginia could have the loan of $3,750,000 without interest for eight years, and Maryland was allowed the same thing, and Maryland happily seized her opportunity and availed herself of this generous fund, and now the men who all signed questionnaires and agreed to stand by the George Washington Memorial Parkway have, by their acts, violated their pledge to the voters of our counties and should resign unless they are able to satisfactorily explain their unprecedented acts to the satisfaction of their constituents. Throw the light on, and let it expose the cause of these political reversals."

4 Members of Family Hurt as Car Hits Pole

Four persons were slightly injured early yesterday morning, when a car operated by C. A. Walter, of Doubswitch, Md., slid into a culvert near Poolesville, Md., and struck a telephone pole, as Walter swerved to avoid hitting a car coming in the opposite direction on the wet road.

Mr. Walter, his wife, son and mother, passengers in the car, were treated for lacerations, and other minor injuries, by Dr. E. W. White, of Poolesville.

ARLINGTON AWAITS AUDITORS' REPORT

Check on Office of County Treasurer Speeded; Loan to Be Made Today.

Arlington County citizens, still stunned by the reported shortage in the county treasurer's office, were still at a loss yesterday what it is all about. With the county courthouse closed, the day was a quiet one with everybody awaiting the report of the State auditors, who started the work of going over the books Thursday morning. The work is not expected to be completed before thirty days.

Harry A. Fellows, chairman of the county board, announced last night that he would proceed today with completing arrangements for a loan of $140,000, as approved by the county board at a special session held on Saturday night.

The loan, Mr. Fellows stated, will be consummated as soon as Charles T. Jesse, who has been appointed county treasurer by the court, has qualified. All indications are that Mr. Jesse will have secured his bond and will take over the office today.

With the reported shortage on Wednesday, the machinery of the county government worked fast. Gov. John Garland Pollard had a force of State auditors on the job late that afternoon. The next move was the speedy work of Delegate Hugh Reid, who by special legislation, made it possible for the county to make the loans which were approved by the county board Saturday night.

E. Wade Ball yesterday still refused to make any statement regarding the reported condition of his office. He did comment on the loyal manner in which the citizens of the county are coming to his support by letter, telegram and personal contact, assuring him of their continued confidence in him.

M'LEAN WILL STAGE LIGHTS CELEBRATION

New Community System to Be Put in Use Tomorrow With Ceremonies.

FAIRFAX BUREAU OF THE POST.
P. O. Box 245, Fairfax, Va.
Phone Fairfax 166.

The School and Civic League of McLean will hold a community celebration tomorrow evening to mark the inauguration of a street lighting system for the community. This rapidly growing section is not incorporated and had great difficulty in securing this service from the lighting company. The Civic League has given a series of entertainments to finance the installation and its maintenance.

The celebration will be divided into two parts, the opening exercises will be held in the engine house of the McLean Volunteer Fire Department, on the Chain Bridge road. A representative of the electric company will officially turn over the system to Ward Kirby, president of the league. The switch, turning on the lights for the first time, will be thrown by the league's first president, J. Stuart Ball. This will be followed by a parade through McLean, ending at the Franklin-Sherman Schoolhouse.

The second part of the evening's entertainment will take place in the school auditorium, under the direction of Mrs. Theodore M. Corner. It will combine the community features with a patriotic and Bicentennial celebration. The various organizations of the McLean community have been asked to contribute at least three minutes each to the evening's entertainment in the school.

In a campaign against diphtheria among the school children of Fairfax County the county health unit, under the direction of Dr. A. W. Carson, director, and Mrs. Fannie Lou Seamans, county health nurse, is giving the Schick test to the children on obtaining their parents' consent. This test is said to be very simple and will make the child immune to the dread disease.

The unit has mailed slips to all parents asking their consent and cooperation in the work. Last week 95 pupils at Floris submitted to the test. Of the number 62 were found to have positive immunization to the disease, while 33 showed negative and will be given the toxin-antitoxin treatment. This work is being carried out under the direction of the State Health Department.

Dr. R. Devin, State dental clinician, who has been working on the school children's teeth during the past six months, is now making an examination of the pupils of the Falls Church School. This will complete his work in Fairfax County and it is stated that most of the pupils in the county have corrected a large number of dental defects under his guidance.

Mrs. Eleanor W. Aud, superintendent of public welfare in Fairfax County, Va., has announced that all requests for local unemployment aid must be accompanied by a list of the names of the unemployed in the community making the request before county aid will be given.

The county welfare board has granteed the request of the Franconia Community League to assist improvements for that community. The grounds of the new school will be graded and improved as there were listed 150 names from the community of unemployed. As soon as funds from the Federal unemployment relief funds are available the work will be started. The board received a similar request from the McLean community and as soon as the necessary information has been received the aid will be granted according to the board members.

The Rev. S. Y. Craig, pastor of the Fairfax Baptist Church, and W. H. Richards, of Clifton, have been selected to fill the vacancies on the county welfare board. All districts in the county are represented on the board.

Boy Left Alone in House Knows How to Find Friend

Aside from his dislike of loneliness, Carl Knollman, 9 years old, has one other striking characteristic and that is his ability to make friends.

Early yesterday Carl woke up and found he was alone in the house. His lusty yells for companionship went unanswered. Without further ado he went to the telephone and said to the operator:

"I'm all alone here and I want some one with me." True, he was somewhat alarmed at being left alone in the house. The operator promised him company.

Then Patrolman Webb Hersperger, at the Bethesda police station, was called for emergency action. Because of the multiplicity and variety of appeals that are made to the police Hersperger was not nonplussed. So he dispatched Patrolman Windsor Poole to the Knollman home at 5 Blackthorn street, Chevy Chase.

For a half hour Poole amused Carl. Then the parents of Carl came in. They had driven some friends into Washington and Carl was sleeping when they left. Meanwhile, Carl and the policeman had become great friends, and at parting Poole promised to visit Carl again.

THE ONCE OVER

By H. I. PHILLIPS

THOSE ANNUAL NEW FOOTBALL RULES.

IT'S no use. The public can't possibly make any progress in its 50-year struggle to understand football. The rules committee has once more scrambled the regulations governing intercollegiate mayhem, and next fall the fans will be as befuddled as ever as they squat on the concrete slabs and try to interpret the action between goal post and goal post.

* * * *

This year the committee comes out of its midwinter huddle to announce six changes, which should throw for a fresh loss the cash customers who had begun to think they could follow the game in spots.

* * * *

First of all, the dramatic rush after the kick-off has been made null and void. Half the team receiving the ball must now stay back near the goal post and let the man who catches the ball go on without the usual convoy of raw beef. He becomes a lone and friendless traveler in enemy territory, guided only by his conscience and a yearning for companionship.

* * * *

Another new rule, which will tend to make the playing field a safer place than the grandstands, provides that the ball "is dead the instant any portion of the carrier's body except hands and feet, touches the ground," regardless of whether any opponent is near him. This would seem to make life's most embarrassing moment that instant when a player running for a touchdown, with a clear field ahead and nobody near enough to recognize him, slips and falls on his ear.

* * * *

Another new regulation (and this one will be the despair of the officials) abandons the flying block and flying tackle by providing that a tackler may leave his feet "only at the instant of contact with the ball carrier."

* * * *

THIS not only calls for rare foot control on the part of the tackler, but puts up to the referee and umpire a problem as difficult as that of which came first, the chicken or the egg.

* * * *

It may call for an extra official known as the "dog" judge. Or an extra set of officials to be designated as the Feet Timing Committee.

* * * *

But what brings a groan from Ebenezer Z. Public is the new rule which provides for more substitutions during a game. Until the committee took this step, it didn't seem possible that this could be done.

* * * *

During the past few seasons there have been so many substitutions that not even the quarterback knew who was on his team.

* * * *

Along toward the end of a game it seemed to the fans that even the faculty members, cheer leaders, relatives and friends were being sent in for a few jolly moments on the battered greensward.

* * * *

Now, however, substitutions are to be made even easier, the committee having decided that a player taken out may be returned to the game in any subsequent period.

* * * *

Yes, there are other new rules, too. But you're confused enough without hearing about them.

* * * *

It will be a wonderful game when they get through with it. In the meantime everybody would seem to be fairly well protected except the spectator.

* * * *

He never comes out of a stadium as good as when he went in.

BARRING THE BEDTIME STORY.

GOV. ROOSEVELT'S recent declaration that public officials accused of dishonesty should always be willing to make a credible explanation of their suddenly acquired riches is the first intimation that his platform will include an Anti-Bedtime Stories plank.

* * * *

REAL MONEY.

Most of the money hoarded in this country is in big bills, Treasury officials say. Twos and fives, we assume.

DIAL FLASHES

By ROBERT D. HEINL

ALTHOUGH it was predicted that this would be an off-season for radio legislation and that few bills would be introduced during the present session of Congress, already fewer than 29 bills have been offered affecting radio—eighteen in the Senate and eleven in the House.

With the end of the session indefinite, it is likely that other radio bills will be introduced. Representative Davis has in mind a bill which would require broadcasting stations to pay a license fee and which would curtail radio advertising announcements. It may provide that stations above 1,000 watts confine their advertising simply to the mention of the name of the sponsor.

Senator Dill is contemplating the introduction of a new radio bill which would limit the ownership of broadcasting stations by chains, he announced recently. Mr. Dill says that he does not object to the chain programs going out over the air, but does object to the ownership of the stations by the various chains, holding that they are destroying local broadcasting.

A Swiss has invented an electric watch which gets its power from a tiny battery. It may be recharged without once a month from a radio receiving set.

DOUBTLESS he is deluged with applicants, but if Dr. Gilbert H. Grosvenor ever has to scout around for prospective lecturers for the National Geographic Society, he might tune in some Monday night on the talks on "The Romance of Rubber," by Harvey S. Firestone, jr. Really, these talks are intended to be "sugar-coated" advertising, and, as readers of this column well know, I have severely criticized certain kinds of radio advertising.

However, there would be less fault to find if all advertisers made such interesting presentations as young Firestone. So many songs by even a great an artist as Lawrence Tibbett sometimes become tiresome, but I have never had too many of Mr. Firestone's travel talks, taking the listener to different parts of the world and frequently acquainting him with what we believe to be much heretofore unwritten history.

Richard Crooks, tenor, will replace Lawrence Tibbett in the Firestone program tonight (WRC, 8:30), because the latter will appear in the title role of Verdi's "Simon Boccanegra" at the Metropolitan Opera House.

THE story of how leap year began will be told by Raymond Knight during a special program over the WJZ network at 10:45 tonight.

Former Premier David Lloyd George's address at a St. David's Day dinner in London will be broadcast through WMAL from 4:30 to 4:35 tomorrow afternoon.

Welsh music and a religious pageant presented in a celebration of St. David's Day at Cardiff, Wales, will be short-waved to the United States and rebroadcast by WRC at 4:20 o'clock tomorrow afternoon. St. David is the patron saint of Wales.

ATTACKING radio's "blatant claim to being a medium of education," Henry R. Luce, managing editor of Time Magazine, asserted that more than 20,000 letters of protest, received by the publication since it announced that it would no longer sponsor its "March of Time" broadcasts, constitute a challenge to the radio systems to improve the quality of their broadcasts at their own expense.

"Should Time or any other business feel obliged to be the 'philanthropist of the air,' to continue paying for radio advertising it does not want in order to provide radio with something worthwhile?" Mr. Luce demanded. "Or is it up to the radio chains to improve the quality of broadcasts even at some reduction of their fat profits?"

The Friday night period heretofore occupied by the "March of Time" will be filled by a new series of programs entitled "Today and Yesterday," to be sponsored by the Dupont de Nemours Co. This broadcast will contrast present-day happenings with their parallels in the past.

THE Glee Club of Mount Holyoke, "the singing college" in which music forms an integral part of the curriculum, will be heard this afternoon (WMAL, 3:45 o'clock) * * * Mrs. Howard Chandler Christy, wife of the artist, will speak on behalf of the Camp Fire Girls tomorrow (WRC 3:45 p. m. * * * Hugh S. Gibson, American Ambassador to Belgium, will be introduced by Frederic William Wile from Geneva on Wednesday * * * Raymond Clapper, of the United Press, will speak over WRC at 7:45 p. m. tomorrow on what is "Back of the News in Washington" * * * Mayor Hermann Luppe, of Nuremburg, Germany, has been working overtime since Christmas answering the fan mail received from American listeners after the broadcast of "Christmas Made in Germany," according to a report received from C. Hooper Trask, Columbia's Berlin representative. Between 1,000 and 1,100 letters were sent across the Atlantic by individuals and Mayor Luppe is answering all of them in long hand, on picture postcards of the city * * * Edward Neil, sports writer for the A. P., will describe exciting moments in covering sports events during "Going to Press" on Wednesday (WMAL, 5:15 p. m.) * * * Gerhart Hauptmann, German dramatist, will deliver a centennial address in memory of Johann Wolfgang von Goethe tomorrow (WMAL, 1:15 p. m.). * * * Jack Kerr, "The Voice of a Thousand Shades," will be heard in his inaugural program tonight (WMAL, 10 o'clock).

BENNY RUBIN told this old favorite in the RKO hour:

A shoe dealer on lower East Side of New York left his store in charge of his little boy with instructions to sell no pairs of shoes for less than $7. When the father returned the boy said:

"Father, I sold a pair of shoes for $7 but the man only had $4 and will bring the other $3 today."

"Haven't I told you not to trust people?" the father replied heatedly. "That man will not be back today with the $3."

"Oh, yes, he will," the boy replied confidently.

"What makes you think that?" the irate parent asked.

"Because I gave him two left shoes."

NEW YORK, Feb. 28.—Oh, is there anything more soul satisfying than comfortable shoes! Neither orchids nor caviar, a Russian prince nor a social triumph, can be as completely satisfying! For, 'tis sad, sad, and humiliatingly true that a lovely lady simply can not be her loveliest nor even lovely if her footsies hurt!

And so that all lovely ladies should be their loveliest, Dame Fashion, who, I might tell you confidentially, my deah, is a lovely lady herself and subject to all the aches and pains of womankind, has decided upon comfortable shoes without any sacrifice of artistry. In fact, the sandals and cut-out shoes of today are a poem, so harmoniously do they cling to the foot, so beautifying are they and so comfortable!

When the famous Deauville sandals came out some years ago, thereby making the fame and fortune of one American girl who designed them and put them on the market in Paris, the general opinion was that while they were the last word in comfort, they were a bit too much so. And that they would, with their nonchalance, as it were, allow the foot to get out of shape, which was all, all wrong, and this has been finally proven. The sandal not only doesn't do any such a thing, but it actually beautifies the foot, by allowing it to resume its natural and beautiful shape. And while one's foot may allow itself to grow a size larger from being sandal shod, it actually looks much smaller in sandals than in any other type of shoe!

And then the comfort! The light, cool foot feeling that makes one's whole body seem buoyant and etherial!

Today every shoe, even Oxfords which still fasten up high on the instep, is so cut out that it becomes a sandal in effect. And so popular has this foot comfort and art become, that the stocking people are offering specially designed hose for sandals! But that's another story, and I'll just have to tell you more of that anon.

* * * *

COATS are fraught with personality these days, not to mention chic and an entirely modern and appropriate elegance. The one I illustrated on the right is a Jane Regny version of spring, in bright green woolen. The way it's belted and the way its sleeves are just nonchalant enough but not too much so, are an important part of its charm, don't you think?

Ant then Schiaparelli, depending more upon the assured poise and elegance of her client than upon the need of giving her client these qualities in her clothing only, designs the seemingly simple model at the left. This is in brown woolen, narrowly collared in summer ermine, and fastened with a single gold button.

* * * *

Chanel runs to stripes, and runs her stripes diagonally and in opposing senses, in her sports group for spring and summer. And these stripes are rather wide and suggestive of Bulgarian coloring.

Helpful Suggestions for Buying Meats

WE HERE at the institute have long maintained that the planning of our meals should be so managed as to permit "left-overs" in the meat line, barring, of course, the occasional meal planned for chops, spare ribs, liver and kidney dishes or cutlets. These latter meats are those which we call "one meal" meats and from them there seldom remains enough for more than, perhaps, a bite at lunch the next day. But when we buy the larger cuts of meat, such as a veal knuckle, a lamb shoulder or leg, a half ham (or a whole one) or a "ham butt" or chicken or beef or even a flank or top of round steak, then it is to the interest of economy both in money and effort to buy a cut large enough to supply the meat course for at least two dinners and, if possible, one other meal. We save fuel by cooking a large cut of meat and then merely reheating in some unusual preparation for a second meal, and we save a second marketing trip and long hours of "watching" while our meat has its first long cooking.

We were planning in keeping with this policy of ours when we planned for you a large leg of lamb for yesterday's dinner. Today, if you used our column suggestion, you have at hand lamb which can be easily shaped and seasoned into delectably flavored croquettes. So here's our menu and the necessary recipes. You will note that the vegetables and dessert call for foods which are easily ordered over the telephone. All this to aid you, if we can, to an easy Monday rather than a hectic, if not, indeed, a "blue" one filled with the hurry of elaborate dinner preparations.

TUESDAY'S DINNER.

Puree of Young Carrots
Lamb Croquettes
Baked Potatoes
Shredded String Beans
Apple Sponge Pudding
Coffee

Puree of Young Carrots.

(Minced Parsley Garnish.)

3 or 4 bunches of young carrots
1 small stalk of celery
1 slice onion
½ teaspoonful salt
1 quart of water
4 tablespoonfuls butter
4 tablespoonfuls flour
1 teaspoonful salt
⅛ teaspoonful paprika
1 pint milk, scalded
Minced parsley

Put the carrots, celery and onion through grinder. Add the water and salt and boil gently until tender. Make a white sauce of the butter, flour, seasoning and milk. Add the carrot puree boiling hot and cook covered in a double boiler for 45 minutes. Serve in cups garnished with minced parsley.

Lamb Croquettes.

2 tablespoons butter
1 cup milk
4 tablespoons flour
2 cups meat
Salt and pepper
Lemon juice

Make a thick sauce of the butter, flour and milk. Remove from stove and add about two cups of chopped lamb. Season with salt, cayenne pepper and a little lemon juice. When cold, shape and let stand until firm. Roll in egg and cracker crumbs and fry in hot fat.

Apple Sponge Pudding.

2 eggs
½ cup water
1 cup sugar
3 large apples
1 cup flour
1 teaspoon baking powder
1 teaspoon vanilla
2 tablespoons butter
¼ teaspoon salt

Pare and slice apples. Grease baking dish with the butter. Put apples in dish and sweeten to taste. Beat egg yolks, add sugar, water and flour sifted with baking powder and salt. Add vanilla and fold in stiffly beaten egg whites. Pour over apples and bake one hour in moderate oven (350 to 375 degrees). Serve either hot or cold with cream.

The Weight Guide.

For individual assistance, write to Nancy Carey, sending a stamped, self-addressed envelope and give age, weight, height and habits of life.

Answers to Readers.

Dear Miss Carey: I am one of those unfortunates who loves to eat—anything at any time—but the most unfortunate part is that everything I eat goes to fat. I am 5 feet 7 inches tall and weigh about 168 pounds. When I satisfy my appetite my disposition is of the best, but when I deprive myself of even one thing I like, I feel so gloomy and grouchy. I will try not to bother you again (that is, for a long time) if you will only help me now. A. E. K.

You won't be "bothered" at all, A. E. K., in fact, I should much prefer to hear from you and to know how you are getting along.

You have not told us your age, so that we can not tell just what your weight should be, but whatever the age and whatever the weight, I warn you it may not be terribly easy at first to strengthen and develop that will power of yours. I am sure that is all that is necessary, and I am sure, too, that you will be successful once you realize what is standing in your way. Who was it who said, "To be forewarned, is to be forearmed?"

If you are really in earnest about reducing, you will have to give up some, although not all, of the things of which you are so fond. Especially so, if these things are the pastries, sweets and rich desserts for which most overweight persons have a fatal failing.

Perhaps, too, your grouchiness is not due so much to the actual "giving up" as it is to being hungry. When you do without bread or cakes or pies, for example, you must take something else in their stead, something filling, but at the same time low in caloric value, as fruit, salads, raw, crisp vegetables, etc. Remember that it is never necessary, nor even advisable, to be really hungry while reducing. There are too many foods which are permitted you to ever allow that. Of course, in cases of long-continued overeating, it is naturally to be expected that the stomach will consider itself quite outraged at the beginning of a new regime, but it will very quickly become accustomed to smaller amounts of food so that in time you will wonder how you ever could have eaten so much. Above all, don't let yourself become a grouch. I doubt if anything is worth that, but I am sure, too, that a little self-control, a little more will power coupled with the earnest desire to reduce your weight, will see you through successfully.

THE NEW Jelleff's

Indoor and Outdoor Gardens

By JANE LESLIE KIFT

WATER LILIES.

DURING the last two years there has been a great increase in the number of garden pools which have been made in even the smallest city yards. People are learning that water lilies are easier to grow than most other plants in their gardens and that they are far less troublesome. They bear flowers in direct proportion to the amount of room you give them and the kind of soil you prepare for their use.

Aquatic plants, as a rule, do best in a rather rich clay loam. One commercial grower suggests that the best soil is that from a pasture. This must be well mixed with one-third well-rotted cow manure. Bonemeal or dried blood are also excellent—about one pound to one and one-half cubic feet of soil. Another authority suggests good garden loam mixed with liberal quantities of well-decomposed manure and bonemeal, and further explains that when the available garden soil is really poor, 50 per cent of leafmold should be used, and if after adding the leafmold the soil still seems poor that 25 per cent of bonemeal should be added. Water lilies are gross feeders and the more plant food you supply the more lilies you will have.

The soil may be placed in wooden boxes or it may be spread over the bottom of the pool. Where wooden boxes are used it is best to make them of cypress as this wood does not decay in water. It is always easier to care for the plants and to keep the pool clean if they are planted in boxes. If, however, you want to grow the lilies without boxes, spread the soil over the bottom of the pool to the depth of twelve inches.

In planting it is safe to allow four to six square feet of pool for each lilly. This will also allow plenty of room for other aquatic pants, which lend interest to the pool.

Water lilies should be planted with the top root or bulb about even with the surface of the soil. It is well to cover them with sand or gravel to keep the fish from disturbing the soil. Twelve inches of water above the crowns of the plants are all that is necessary. As a rule the plants are started in shallow water and the depth increased as they grow larger and stronger. A pool, to be successful and at all times have a maximum of blooms, must be in the sun.

Hardy water lilies do best when planted after the middle of April, as at that time they start growing in their natural state. Tender lilies are not planted until after the tenth of May.

Culbertson on Contract

By Ely Culbertson

World's Champion Player and Greatest Card Analyst

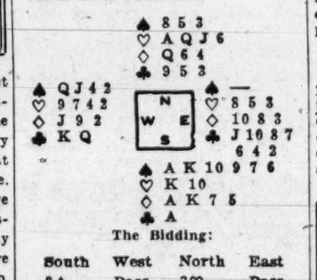
SURMOUNTING INSUPERABLE DIFFICULTIES.

WHEN you have embarked on a Slam contract and the second lead discloses the fact that your opponent to the left has four trumps to the Q J with no honors in the Dummy Hand, a player can not be severely criticized for conceding defeat. However, some Contract players are of the "Never say die" type and Mr. O. P. Watson, a member of the Cavendish Club in Toronto, Canada, is a charter member of that school, as is shown by the hand below which played an important part in the winning of the Men's Pair Championship in that city.

South—Dealer.
Both sides vulnerable.



The Bidding:

South	West	North	East
2♠	Pass	3♡	Pass
3♠	Pass	3NT	Pass
4◇	Pass	4♠	Pass
6♠	Dbl.	Pass	Pass
Pass

I am indebted to Mr. J. W. Jacobson for the following description of the play:

The club King was won by South and a spade led, disclosing an ominous absence of this suit in the East. At this stage two of the South players gave up the ghost and conceded two trump tricks to West. But O. P. is made of sterner stuff. His next play was a low diamond to the Queen followed by a club from North, a ruff by South and, on the club Queen dropping, he made the accurate guess that West had no more. He next laid down the Ace and King of diamonds, then the King and ten of hearts, won by North with the Knave. A diamond discard followed on the Ace of hearts, then the Queen of hearts was ruffed by South leaving West with the Queen, Knave and four of trumps and South with the King, Ten and nine. The rest was easy and Mr. Watson was the only player to make a Small Slam.

TODAY'S POINTER.

Do not permit any one to criticize you for taking time to properly plan the play of the hand. Frequently the difficulties which confront you are only insuperable to the wooden player. Imagination and accuracy will solve many of the playing problems.

Wives of Tomorrow

By FRANCES M'DONALD

Chiseler and Doormat!

DEAR Frances McDonald: I have a boy friend of whom I am very proud, because he is popular, jolly, always full of fun, nice looking, very effectionate and also president of the club to which we both belong.

I have been going with him for over a year, but not very regular, I never know when I am going to see him again, until about an hour before, but I never bother because when I do ask him he just says, "Oh I'll call you, or I'll be seein' you," and never gives me any satisfaction. That is one thing that makes me cross at him, but not one-fourth as cross as this next reason.

He couldn't dance when I met him, so he begged me to teach him. The club we belong to meets once a month and we dance after the meeting. I thought it would be a good chance for me to teach him, so I did. He picked it up rapidly and after a few more evenings of practice we were getting along fine. So then after the next meeting, we dance again, but he never came near me but once on the dance floor and that was just to say a few words—all the rest of the evening he kept dancing with other girls! So after the dance I went home immediately on the street car, so he wouldn't think I was waiting for him to bring me home (he has a swell big car). I was so angry to think of his treating me like that after my teaching him how to dance, because he treats me fine when we are alone. This happened on a Tuesday evening. The following Sunday he calls me up and says "What are you doing tonight?" I, like a boob, says, "nothing." He says "Then I'll come out and we'll take a ride." I said "O. K." I just couldn't refuse him. I love him too much, and I am too soft-hearted, bashful, and conscious to say anything of what I had planned to say, because I thought he'd not do it again. Furthermore, I just hate to bring up an argument.

The time flew, and the next month's meeting came—and all of these weeks between I saw him once a week—and at this meeting he does the very same thing. Now this gets me so mad, so I am asking your advice on what I should say to him.

CHARLENE.

Well, we are glad to hear that at least you are mad! Do you think you could manage to stay that way? Or will you at the earliest possible moment fall into this swain's arms and forget that he has publicly snubbed you?

You know men are people—just like ourselves. They respect some of their acquaintances more than they do others. Can you picture what they think of a woman who accepts rebuffs with the air of a faithful doormat, resigned to a doormat's life? Never date this ignoramus again as long as you live. He has chiseled from you the dancing lessons he needed and now has no further need of you except on nights when he finds all other doors but yours closed to him. There are more cheap men taking up room on sofas today than ever before since sofas were discovered. This one is an example. And why girls like yourself go on receiving them is completely beyond this material soul who expects every may to give an account of himself or park in some hotel lobby. Unless a man has some plan for adding to a woman's enjoyment, what right has he to ask for an evening of her time? We are not an entertainment committee for the other sex. The days when the whole family rejoiced and ran out to tell the neighbors of the house succeeded in having something in a collar and tie come and sit in the parlor every Sunday night have long since passed. Daughters have plenty to do with their evenings these days. And they should not be afraid to let the parkers know it.

That is our advice and we know that you will not heed one word of it. But some other girl may. So our time has not been wasted.

Fifth Avenue Fashions

FOR SUNDAY NIGHTS.

Here's a fascinating little model that is very exclusive, though inexpensive. It is fashioned of red lace, quite the newest idea of Paris. It is equally smart made sleeveless or with long sleeves, just as you please about it. The cape collar falls sufficiently over the shoulders to give the effect of brief sleeves.

And it's so easily put together, you'll be delighted.

Style No. 530 is designed for sizes 14, 16, 18, 20 years. Size 16 requires 5¼ yards of 39-inch material.

Price of pattern, 15 cents. Address Fashion Dept., The Washington Post, Fifth avenue and Twenty-third street, New York City.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

LET THE BABY CRAWL.

A FEW books on exercises for infants are on the market. At least one was written by an American and there are several by Europeans. None of these has had much influence because babies are wise enough to get along without athletic direction. Almost from the moment of birth a baby spends most of his waking hours in doing setting-up exercises. Bending, which comes so hard to "stove-up" adults, is the natural state of a baby. He puts in much time bending and unbending, and he neither makes wry faces about it nor gets out of breath.

To begin with, his arms are better members than his legs, but by dint of eternal kicking he succeeds in developing his leg capacity beyond that of his arms. At first his back muscles are not equal to the job of holding his body and neck in the vertical position, but by almost constant writing, twisting, turning and squirming this deficiency is corrected.

I wish to emphasize particularly the advantage of the exercise we call crawling, and to suggest to parents that they promote it. Crawling is excelent for the development of the heavy muscles of the back, locomotion is accomplished partly by the trunk muscles and partly by those of the legs and arms.

It has the advantage of getting the baby around, quickening his interests, educating him and giving him exercise for his heavy muscles at a time when it is not possible for him to keep his knee joints from bending as he stands or to maintain an erect position, or when his leg bones are not firm enough to carry his weight without bowing. In crawling only the thigh is used and the femur is apt to be rigid enough.

I never heard of a baby made bowlegged by crawling. I have heard of mothers who try to make the baby walk rather than crawl—a great mistake. It is wrong mechanically, physiologically and from the standpoint of education. A baby learns by observation. He is taught by example. Since those he is imitating are standing on their hind legs and moving about by using these members, that is the objective of the baby. He is never satisfied to crawl if he can walk, because he sees mother walking.

Something tells him, however, that for the time being it is better for him to push around with some sort of a crawl. He should be allowed to have his own way. It is not good policy to make him try to stand or walk as long as he prefers to crawl.

Nor should his method of crawling be interfered with. He may want to imitate a crab and go backward or sideways, or he may maneuver after some other outlandish fashion. The way suits his machinery, although it may not suit that of somebody else or conform to the accepted rules of the game. When the time comes to make the change the youngster can be depended upon to imitate those about him.

The great objection to crawling is that floors are apt to be dirty and cold, and forbidden things may find their way there. Crawling directs the baby's vision toward the floor. He may acquire too much floor education. But floors can be kept clean and warm.

PNEUMONIA.

Mrs. E. L. writes: I am 23 years of age, the mother of two children, and had lobar pneumonia in January, 1931, and bronchial pneumonia in July, 1931. The baby, who is not quite 4 months old, was born in September, 1931.

1. Will you please explain the meaning of this report: "Lung shows thickened pleura and small amount of fluid superimposed upon interstitial pneumonitis right base. Upper lobe is partly collapsed with partial pneumothorax."

2. What are my chances of developing tuberculosis, or does it eventually follow such a state of sickness?

3. Considering my lungs to be weak, what effect would it have on the baby I carried during this illness?

4. Do you think, with proper food and rest, I can build up my resistance?

REPLY.

1. Chronic pneumonia and pleurisy in the lower part of your right lung. There is some air in the pleura of the upper part of this lung, and this has caused that part of the lung to collapse.

2. Your history and the present condition probably mean that you are tubercular.

3. If you have tuberculosis, your baby is in considerable danger. The danger is principally due to association. You should wean the baby and have some one else care for him, for your sake and his.

4. Yes.

ARLISS FILM DRAWS PRAISE OF MINISTER

God Is Ever Ready to Help Those Asking for Aid, Dr. Stockdale Says.

"When the belief in God goes every fine value of life breaks down," said Dr. Allen A. Stockdale, speaking last night at the First Congregational Church.

Dr. Stockdale saw hope and encouragement regarding spiritual things manifested in the preaching film, "The Man Who Played God," now playing in this city, in which George Arliss sets out the redemption of a doubting world, and the regaining of happiness by human service.

Dr. Stockdale said in part:

"The problems of the world are too big for the wisest and strongest, the healthiest and wealthiest. What must they be for the weaker and more woebegone ones. It is significant to note that the screen suggests the salutation of human problems by simple faith and trusting prayer.

"In the play, 'The Man Who Played God,' we see not only the help that comes to the one who prayed, but the redemption to the despairing soul who, observing the sick man at prayer set about to answer the prayer himself.

"What a message to our day! Millions are cursing God for the suffering and sadness in the world. It is forgotten that God remains ever ready to help amidst the miseries that man himself has produced and perpetuated in the world.

"We throw ourselves to the thrills of the world. We give ourselves to the luxuries and excesses of the flesh. We break human and divine laws in the mad struggles for wealth and fame until sitting amidst the ashes of exhaustion and defeat we cry to God for help. In loving mercy he waits for the cry of every child.

"God does not snatch away our liberty to thrust wisdom upon us. He waits in compassion till we need Him and ask for His help. Out of our necessities and humilities come our earnest prayers. The truest ambition of noble souls is to help God answer the multitudes of prayers, once the voices of earthly children are lifted in faith to God for succor."

Dr. Sheen Says Patriotism Abused

Modern Charges Are Held Same as Those Laid Before Pilate.

"There is nothing so sublime that can not be prostituted, and even the noble virtue of patriotism may have its prostitutors," it was declared yesterday by the Rev. Dr. Fulton Sheen, of Catholic University, speaking over a Nation-wide radio hook-up during the Catholic hour, sponsored by the National Council of Catholic Men.

Father Sheen said that patriotism has been made a cloak for the charges brought against the Catholic Church. The conflict between church and state, he said, is one issue which will always hold interest. He pointed out that the objections against the church on the part of the modern state, if set in order would be: First, the church is perverting the Nation by its parochial school system, which embodies a different educational policy than the public school; second, the church refuses to give tribute to America, as her heart is across the sea, and third, the church looks upon herself as sort of king and refuses to accept the democratic principle that one religion is as good as another.

"Against the marble balustrade of Pilate's judgment seat," Father Sheen said, "the charges rolled, and they were three: We have found this man perverting our Nation; he has forbidden us to give tribute to Caesar; he says He is Christ, the King. The same charges brought against the church today—every word a lie."

Katharine Cornell Draws Thousands

Many Wait in Line Hours to Get Tickets for "The Barretts."

The line of persons waiting for the ticket sale for the engagement of Katharine Cornell, who appears in the Shubert-Belasco Theater next week in "The Barretts of Wimpole Street," extended two blocks from the theater when the box office opened yesterday at 1 o'clock. The first man to take his place at the door of the theater arrived at 6:30 yesterday morning. It was an hour before the next arrival, and from then on patrons came in quick succession. Even with two ticket windows open the line kept growing instead of diminishing and throughout the afternoon extended from the theater to Riggs National Bank building.

It is evident that before Miss Cornell reaches Weshington all the performances will be sold out. Her management stated yesterday that under no circumstances will her visit here be extended, nor will it be possible to put in any extra performances. The role of Elizabeth Barrett in this drama is one of the longest ever written, rivaling Hamlet in the number of lines. The actress is on the stage from the rise of the first curtain until three minutes before the final curtain.

Miss Cornell, much as she would like to put in an extra matinee in the cities she plays, finds it impossible in view of the exhausting nature of her part.

About The Showshops

With NELSON B. BELL

IT brought back vivid recollections of my first meeting with Mme. Olga Petrova and the great surprise I experienced on that occasion. I mean the meeting with Irene Rich in the dressing-room, backstage at RKO-Keith's, following her second performance in "Ask Your Wife" Saturday afternoon.

IRENE RICH.

Mme. Petrova, you may remember, habitually appeared on the screen in austere roles of aristocratic leiness or the tragic impersonation of ladies of depressing emotionalism, whereas offstage, and left to her own devices and natural impulses, she was a delightful person of quick wit, brilliant mind and utmost vivacity.

It was much the same with Miss Rich. For some inexplicable reason she was restricted for too long to what she denominates "gingham apron" parts. While she has executed these homespun chores assigned her by the studio higher-ups with great skill and wholesomeness, they have, nevertheless, created a mistaken notion of the Rich personality.

Like Mme. Petrova, Miss Rich is an animated, witty and literate young woman who radiates vitality and an alert interest in all that is going on about her in a world which she obviously deems very interesting and beautiful—and this in spite of the fact that at the moment she is engaged in the distressing and doleful business of fighting off an attack of the flu that threatened to interrupt her tour in Philadelphia last week.

ALTHOUGH probably few have given it a thought, Irene Rich is the record-holder as leading woman in the Will Rogers films. Nine times they have appeared together, the association—and a most happy one—dating clear back to the Samuel Goldwyn production of "Jes' Call Me Jim," a picture that Mr. Goldwyn once admitted to your reporter should have been sent out over the country as a "special" instead of a regular program release. No one realized until it was too late just what a fine picture "Jes' Call Me Jim" really was.

That, of course, was back in the silent days of the cinema. Miss Rich was elevated to the part of the village milliner in the Rogers vehicle almost directly from the rank of "extra" on the Goldwyn lot. She is one of the few who ever achieved, and survived, so rapid a promotion from the bottom to the top. However, the path since has not always been smooth.

With the coming of sound and dialogue, Miss Rich almost surrendered to a rabid attack of inferiority complex, induced by the bugaboo of memorizing lines. The Rich memory, she tells me, she looked upon as something to all intents and purposes nonexistent. She can not explain it, either, because, with no consciousness whatever that she was doing so, she had memorized many classic compositions as a pianist of more than ordinary gifts, who almost adopted the concert stage as a profession instead of either the screen or the dramatic stage. Nevertheless, the fearfulness was there and almost led to her undoing. It was aggravated by an inopportune misunderstanding with the studio to which she was then under contract.

It has taken this and one or two earlier fliers in vaudeville to reassure this talented actress in the matter of a retentive memory. She is, I learn from other sources, one of the quickest studies in the profession. Recently when called upon to play the leading role in a stage production on the West Coast she learned 100 pages of lines—"sides" to you, actor—in less than a fortnight. Letter perfect and ready to go on!

The "feel" of an audience out front she finds intensely exhilarating, but still insists—despite a deep-seated ambition to move audiences in the leading role of "the great American play"—that she is "just another picture person."

Her present tour, begun in a more serious sketch than the frivolous little thing she is doing currently, was inaugurated last November and has 50-some weeks still to run according to contract. That contract however, stipulates that Miss Rich may terminate it at any time upon two weeks' notice, to return to the screen. That is a clause that may be exercised within the near future.

FIVE pictures are at the present time in prospect for Miss Rich. It is expected that she will be called to appear again opposite Will Rogers when, and if, a sequel to "They Had to See Paris" is made. It is for this subject that Fifi D'Orsay also anticipates being called back to the Coast.

Then there are other tentative engagements on the M-G-M lot and still others to follow that, just as soon as the studios shake off the depression and get back on full time and free breathing.

But Miss Rich's concern is not wholly centered in her own career. There are her two charming daughters to be thought of. The elder of the two, Frances, Washington saw earlier in the season with Francine Larrimore in "Brief Moment," at the Belasco. With the closing of "Brief Moment," she is now in rehearsal in her second production—a fine promise of future greatness, with so many more experienced players seeking engagements.

The younger daughter, Jane, at the age of 15, is attending an exclusive girls' college preparatory school at Santa Barbara, Calif., and writing her mother long and profusely illustrated letters that are gay and amusing. Frances graduated from Smith College last year.

Some day, either on the screen or the stage, I hope to see Irene Rich cast to play nobody but her own enlivening self. What a hit she will be!

WHEN Lou Brown, the Grover Whalen of the Fox Theater executive organization, took me back for a brief visit with El Brendel and his gracious and accomplished wife, known professionally as Flo Bert—also on Saturday afternoon—I began to have misgivings lest the usually reliable Mr. Brown had piloted me up the wrong alley. These looked more like home folks than actors when the door was opened into their spacious double dressing chamber up on that eighty-ninth floor of the theater building, where all the best dressing rooms seem to be.

EL BRENDEL.

Mr. Brendel, luxuriating between shows in a lounging robe and a bight light, was busy picking out what I was told was a column for a captivating and coaxing contemporary on a portable typewriter balanced precariously on his knees. Miss Bert, a stunning brunette, all done up in white most effectively, was engaged over behind the wardrobe trunk in a little plain and fancy sewing.

Any or all of this could have been going on right out at my own house on Gallatin street. You know, hearthstone and fireside stuff, domestic-like and everything.

AND the first impression proved to be anything but a false and phoney steer. The Brendels are like that. Wholesome, unaffected, likable people without "front," pretense or the slightest suggestion of high-hat.

They have teamed together on the stage for the past fifteen years and are not only still on speaking terms but are as happy together as a couple of kids. During the time that her husband was continuously engaged in picture-making on the Fox lot, Miss Bert devoted her entire attention to domestic concerns with no thought of the stage. When he embarked on the present tour of the de luxe houses with a revival of some of his old vaudeville material, friend wife was right back at his side, working with all of the surety and verve of one who has not missed a performance in years! El Brendel seems prouder of this than of his own ability to pick up where he left off many months ago and still wow the customers in the flesh. Real troupers as well as real home folks, these two.

And if you think this Brendel fellow is a simple-minded yokel with a Scandinavian dialect that you could cut with a dull knife, you are practically off your nut, not to say cuh-razy! El Brendel has no more natural dialect than you and I have—well, you, anyhow!—and his voice is not treble and shaky like that, either. That is all part of the act and goes on and comes off just like the grease paint, funny suit and trick derby.

But what El Brendel is not, is nowhere near so important as what he is. He is, then, a seasoned comedian with a well-grounded and shrewd notion of what this thing called life is all about and what are its important aspects and which its negligible. He has, as I have said, no delusions of grandeur, nor does he feel that being funny at the beck and call of a director, or the demands of a living audience, is the easiest or more important thing that even one who is recognized as a star in his line can do. In short, he has an honest ambition as well as a keen eye for what will most probably prove the most successful medium for the long pull through the years, when Swedish humor, possibly, may have worn out its welcome.

In the back of El Brendel's mind are plans that ought to work out as satisfactorily in his case as they have in the cases of numerous others. He wants gradually to slip out of the purely comic parts and work into legitimate character delineations, much as Wallace Beery has done. Had Wallace Beery adhered to the Swedish washwoman type of thing he used to do with Roscoe ("Fatty") Arbuckle, he would have been through and forgotten these many years now. But he was crafty enough to wend his way leisurely into the ranks of the foremost of our character actors. Brendel has it in mind to do the same thing when the time comes. He has the intelligence and the inherent ability to negotiate the transition handsomely.

IT may or may not be remembered by Washington theatergoers, but El Brendel and Flo Bert were on the last bill ever presented at B. F. Keith's in this city under the two-a-day policy and the management of Roland Robbins. His entrance into pictures followed shortly afterward under circumstances which he makes extremely amusing in the telling.

He was engaged for Fox films, but declined to discuss salary until he had had a try at the new medium. All he asked was railroad and drawing room fare to the Coast and back in case he didn't make good before the cameras and microphones. Presenting himself at the Fox offices, he was allowed to sit around for three or four days without ever being given a tumble. Then the man who had recommended him happened down the hall and saw him. He was then hurried over to the set where they were making "The Cock-Eyed World" and introduced to the assistant director. In time he met Raoul Walsh, the director—who had no part for him and could perceive no special need for him in the picture, but told him to think up something that would fit and he would see if he could work it in.

When the first bit was shot and the rushes shown to the execs, Winfield R. Sheehan spotted the new face in a flash and was sold on him from the beginning. A five-year contract was signed that same afternoon.

They thought El had ad libbed the scene he gave them, hot off the bat. As a matter of cold fact, he had been doping out bits like that all the way out on the train and, like Jimmy Durante, "had millions of them" all ready to shoot at a moment's notice!

Yeah, a pretty shrewd fellow. I told you that to begin with!

This MORNING with SHIRLEY L. POVICH

Biloxi, Miss., Feb. 28.

A GROWING need for catchers who can throw as well as catch is being felt among big league club owners and managers as the 1932 campaign approaches and this point in the defensive armor of the teams is slated to be the subject of much reinforcement.

Ever since Ben Chapman stole 61 bases last year and Pepper Martin ran wild against the Athletics in the 1931 world series, a revival of the art of base running and base stealing on a grand scale has been forecast for next season. Every club will be forced to get into the competition for speed on the bases and throwing catchers at the risk of being outclassed.

Chapman and Martin undeniably have revived the base-stealing consciousness among the baseball public, but long before their feats of last season club managers were planning not only to meet the new menace, but to unsheath this salient offensive weapon on their own account. The return to base stealing received its impetus in the National League with the return of the dead ball, but the cause was found in the American League in the comparative lack of throwing catchers.

Washington stands among the small and select group boasting throwing catchers in the presence of Roy Spencer, the toughest hombre in a baseball suit, when it comes to blocking the plate, and the possessor of one of the finest throwing arms in the big leagues. Beyond Spencer, however, the club is not well fortified behind the bat, as neither Cliff Bolton nor Howard Maple are able to carry the burden.

A regular catcher of the Spencer type, however, can be expected to work at least 125 games during the season and Manager Johnson is well satisfied with the Nats' position on this score. Spencer's arm is a constant source of gratification to both Griffith and Johnson and there are few who dare to take liberties with the Nats' catcher on the bases.

Spencer is entering his fourth year with the Nats after serving as reserve catcher with the Pirates in 1925, 1926 and 1927. He was declared a free agent by Judge Landis in 1928 as a result of a "cover up" deal and sold his services to the Nats for $15,000, which he was able to pocket and which is testimony to the fact that Griffith regarded him highly from the start.

Ben Chapman unquestionably is the hardest man to catch stealing in the American League, Spencer believes. There are others, Johnson of the Tigers, Carl Reynolds, now with the Nats; Rothrock and Oliver of the Red Sox and Averill of the Indians, but Chapman is in a class by himself, says Spencer.

"It is the lead Chapman gets, mostly," said Spencer. "He's fast all right, and he can fly down the straightaway, no question about that, but he gets a great start. That's what counts. He steals a lot of ground on the pitchers and takes 2 feet more leeway going down to second than any other base-runner in the league.

"You can't blame the pitchers, though. Base-stealing has been so neglected in the last few years that the pitchers haven't had to worry much about it. Sometimes they never had the proper coaching in keeping a runner nailed to the bag. As a matter of fact, with the pitchers so lax as they have been in the last few years, there should have been even more base stealing than in the days when Cobb, Carey, Collins and Milan were running wild."

The Athletics, however, have done quite well, with no more attention paid to base stealing than to the siege of Woosung. It was a month before the club was of the mind to, or able to steal two bases last season, and their season's total of stolen bases was 27.

The Athletics succeeded the Yankees as the foremost exponents of sock and scram, with the emphasis on the sock, and they were able to overpower the opposition with the length of their wallops for three seasons, but 1932 may bring a change.

The Yankees, also possessing a formidable array of sockers, have the added asset of the base-running of Chapman, Combs, Lary, and even Ruth and Gehrig, and it is from that the Athletics will meet serious competition this year. So it behooves Mr. Mack to look to his base-running and also to his catching, for Mickey Cochrane's throwing arm is one of the poorest among the league's regular catchers.

President Clark C. Griffith, manager Walter Johnson, Coach Nick Altrock and the writer, are all lamenting the fact that it will not be possible to be at the ringside at the big Ritchie Coliseum show Monday night.

Reynolds and Myer Join Nationals

Pepped-Up Vets Are Due to Take Initial Workout Today.

Many Tales But Few Fish as Nats Enjoy Off-Day.

By SHIRLEY L. POVICH
(Sports Editor of The Post).

BILOXI, Miss., Feb. 28.—The squad of Nats encamped here will be augmented in the daily workouts tomorrow by two valuable members of the team, Carl Reynolds and Buddy Myer. Reynolds, the acquisition from the White Sox in the trade involving Sam Jones and Irving Hadley, has been granted permission to join the squad a week in advance of the other outfielders, as has Myer, who lives only two hours' distant at New Orleans.

The little group practicnig at Biloxi field will present an even more familiar makeup when Sam Rice joins the squad on Tuesday, five days ahead of the remainder of the group of outfielders and infielders.

Reynolds and Myer were due to arrive at midnight tonight and their early coming is a pleasing commentary on their efforts to reach early form by the start of the season, when Manager Johnson hopes to get the team off to a flying start in the pennant race, the goal of every manager, but almost an obsession with Johnson this season.

Cute Little Fish Are Tossed Back.

The stillness of Sunday in the Nats' training camp was broken only by the splashing of the Gulf of Mexico as the little party of ball players turned fishermen for the day and cast back upon the waters the minnow-sized trout that were too cute to keep.

Cliff Bolton, Carl Fischer, Rags Ragland and Johnny Friederichs tried their piscatorial skill from the pier abutting the hotel and, inasmuch as no two of their 23 fish were caught simultaneously, Coach Eddie Ainsmith accused the quartet of catching the same fish 23 times.

The debate was carried into the dining room and ranged long and loud as the coaches contended it was a dumb fish that would allow itself to be caught 23 times and the players claiming that it was a smart fish indeed who got 23 meals of bait in the knowledge that the fishermen weren't playing for keeps. At a late hour tonight, the mental capacity of the fish was still being argued with the coaches apparently having won the point that all 23 fish were the same fish.

Brings Back Reports But No Fish.

With the makeup of the Nats virtually a carry-over from last year, with the exception of two second string pitching berths, the fishing talent among the veterans and rookies at the camp here has been a foremost topic of the training siege.

Fred Marberry, a fisherman from far back, has become disgusted with fishing conditions here. Marberry awoke at an early hour yesterday morning to try his luck in one of the numerous bayous and brought back sensational reports but no fish. They fish here with live shrimp to entice the black bass, which are called green trout in this country, and spotted perch. As long as your shrimp is alive and kicking, you've got a chance for a fish, but when your shrimp dies on your hands, one must bait up again with a conscious and more virile shrimp.

Marberry's shrimp, or "shwimp" as it is called by native Biloxians, was an old renegade, an ill-tempered little animal which attempted to clout the bass over the head and knock 'em cold before dragging 'em out of the water. He beat off a half dozen 10-pound denizens of the deep in this manner but couldn't make the kill and Marberry came away empty handed, incensed at his shrimp and threatening revenge.

Like Bad Penny, Shrimp Comes Back.

Carefully nursing his shwimp on his way back to the hotel, Marberry matched him with Mrs. Lloyd Brown's boston bulldog to teach the shwimp a lesson. The shwimp cast one look at his new adversary, grabbed him by the throat and left him cut and bleeding after a battle that lasted only a minute.

Thwarted thusly, Marberry gathered

Sandlot Outfielder "Reports" at Biloxi

Special to The Washington Post.

Biloxi, Miss., Feb. 28.—An unannounced recruit joined the Washington squad here this afternoon and late this evening Al Schacht was busily engaged in taking up a collection to meet the new rookie's immediate needs. He arrived, traveling light, possessed of little but the hope of gaining a tryout with the Nats and subsequently a contract in a minor league.

The wandering rookie is Louis Babcock, of Detroit, a sandlot outfielder, who has convinced Manager Johnson that Johnson invited him to Biloxi last summer when he visited the Nats' dugout at Detroit. He will be issued a uniform tomorrow and will look into the face of some pitching by Al Schacht and Johnson himself. Babcock is 18, a strapping youngster, endowed with all the physical attributes of a ball player and apparently professing a spirit that will help him in his efforts to make the grade.

Concord "Booters" Beat Baltimoreans

D. C. Germans Blank Visitors, 3 to 0, in Intercity Game.

Loss First Recorded Against Visitors This Season.

IT remained for the local Concord Club to administer the first defeat of the year to the German Club of Baltimore, and the Teuton prides of the District played like champions to whitewash the Monumental City eleven here yesterday, 3 to 0. Prior to the match the Baltimore Germans had not lost a game in fourteen starts.

Heinie Heise, at goal for the Concords, was easily the defensive star of the game. In the first 45 minutes of play the Baltimore aggregation bombarded the Concord uprights continuously and the stalwart Heise was called on to save from every angle.

During this first half play was fast, and despite the fact that Concord scored the Baltimore kickers had a slight edge. It was not until two minutes before the midway whistle that Johnny Malloch broke through for the first tally of the encounter.

Concords on Defensive Near End.

The second half found the local booters on the offensive for the most part. About twenty minutes after the restart Malloch made one of the most perfect crosses witnessed on local fields this season and Evans converted with a daft tap past the Baltimore goalie.

Shortly after the second score Malloch again passed perfectly to the mouth of the visitors' goal, but none of his teammates was in position to

Tartempion Lands Chase at Auteuil

Auteuil, France, Feb. 28 (A.P.).—A. Berg's Tartempion won the Prix Leon Rambaud, a 3,500-meter steeplechase, at Auteuil today. Rebenti was second and Calomel third.

Sundt Next Badger Grid Coach, Is Report

Madison, Wis., Feb. 28 (A.P.).—members of the athletic council today signed an agreement on a new football coach at the University of Wisconsin and it was decided their choice was Guy Sundt, assistant coach for several years.

From a usually reliable source it was learned that the council chose Sundt. The council's statement said a recommendation has been forwarded to the board of regents and that the regents may announce his name at their discretion. The regents are scheduled to meet March 9.

Allison Beats Lott In Miami Net Final

Texan Wins in Straight Sets; Lott-Rainville Win Doubles.

Miami Beach, Fla., Feb. 28 (A.P.).—Wilmer Allison, Austin, Tex., won the singles championship of the second annual Pan-American tennis tournament here today by defeating George Lott, Chicago, defending champion, in straight sets, 6—2, 7—5, 6—4.

Lott and Marcel Rainville, Toronto, Canadian champion, won doubles honors in the tournament by their defeat of Allison and J. Gilbert Hall, East Orange, N. J., 7—5, 6—4, 6—1.

Allison, a national doubles champion, was far superior to his opponent in the singles contest. His play was consistent throughout, as contrasted with the unsteadiness which cost Lott the match and the title.

The Texan, by his victory, scored one leg on the Pan-American singles trophy. Lott has a leg on the trophy by virtue of winning the championship last year.

BLAZING THE BASEBALL TRAIL

Bradenton, Fla., Feb. 28 (A.P.).—Spring training for the entire squad of world champion Cardinals is supposed to open here tomorrow, but tonight's prospects were that the famous infield of 1931 would be only sparsely represented, due to holdouts and delayed arrivals.

Frankie Frisch, Charley Gelbert and Chick Hafey, who have been seeking better salary terms for weeks, will be officially tagged as holdouts if they fail to arrive tomorrow—and there were no indications tonight that any of them would appear. "Sunny Jim" Bottomley will remain in St. Louis for another week undergoing treatment for an internal disorder.

St. Louis, Feb. 28 (A.P.).—The first contingent of St. Louis Browns, including only four players, left here this afternoon for the spring training camp at West Palm Beach, Fla.

George Blaeholder, and Big Chad Kimsey, pitchers; Lin Storti, recruit infielder of last year, and Jimmy McLaughlin, who is to try out for third base, were the players aboard the train. Pitcher Dick Coffman is to join the group at Atlanta, and the other pitchers and catchers are due to join it at Jacksonville.

Richardson Springs, Calif., Feb. 28 (A.P.).—Twenty-three Detroit Tigers who have completed a week and a half of conditioning here, moved on to Palo Alto tonight. They will join a dozen other Tigers there, and the entire squad will hold its first practice of the spring training season tomorrow morning.

Manager Bucky Harris said he was well pleased with the manner in which his charges here have rounded into shape. He has received no word of any holdouts among the players due to report tomorrow.

Fort Myers, Fla., Feb. 28 (A.P.).—Roger Cramer, the Manahawkin, N. J., outfielder, who had been missing from camp, arrived last night in time to spend a slow Sunday with the rest of the Athletics. He had been in Leesburg, Fla., the last ten days, he said.

With some more infielders and outfielders who arrived tonight, he will have his first workout tomorrow.

Boston, Feb. 28 (A.P.).—The Boston Red Sox departed today for its new training camp at Savannah, Ga. Manager John Collins headed the party, which included but two players, Justin McLaughlin and Bob Barr, Greater Boston pitching prospects.

This player list, however, will be greatly augmented at New York.

St. Petersburg, Fla., Feb. 28 (A.P.). Although Sunday baseball is permitted in St. Petersburg, the New York Yankees didn't go near the ball park today. The various golf courses

3 Ringmen Feature In Comeback Week

Dempsey, Leonard, and Delaney to See Action.

Second Comeback Attempt Listed for Leonard.

NEW YORK, Feb. 28 (A.P.).—Call this "comeback week" in national fistic circles and let it go at that. Jack Dempsey continues his exhibition tour; Benny Leonard, retired undefeated lightweight champion, ties again at New York, and Jack Delaney, former light-heavyweight champion, returns to the ring after a long absence.

Dempsey boxes four rounds at Dayton tomorrow night and four more at Cincinnati Thursday night against a quartet of unknowns. Leonard, whose first comeback attempt here several months ago resulted in a questionable knockout victory over Pal Silvers, tries again at the St. Nicholas Arena tomorrow night.

Leonard Meets McMahon In New York.

He faces Billy McMahon, New York welterweight. Delaney will meet Phil Johnson, Jersey City heavyweight, at Bridgeport, Conn., Thursday.

Boston, Hollywood and San Francisco come through with the "big" bouts of the week. Jackie Fields, welterweight champion, meets Johnny Indrisaro, of Boston, in a ten-round nontitle match in the Boston Garden Friday; Stanley Poreda, Jersey City heavyweight, tackles Jimmy Flinker, of Vallejo, Calif., in a ten-rounder at Hollywood Friday, and Young Corbett, Fresno welter-

Big Ten Court Race Enters Home Stretch

Chicago, Feb. 28 (A.P.).—The Western Conference basket ball championship race goes into the stretch this week, with Northwestern and Purdue running almost head and head for the prize.

Tonight the Boilermakers had the edge, leading the league with eight victories and one defeat, but Northwestern still had a big chance of getting up to win. The Wildcats had eight victories and two defeats, and one of its two remaining games will be played against Purdue Saturday night.

Minnesota, Michigan and Illinois all had mathematical changes of showing in the title, but as their chances required utter collapse by Purdue and Northwestern, the fight was pretty definitely between the latter pair.

Perkins, British Golf Ace, Is Used to Being Held Up

Miami, Fla., Feb. 28 (A.P.).—T. Philip Perkins, former British amateur golf champion, recuperated sufficiently today to hope for early release from the hospital, where he is under treatment for a bullet wound received early yesterday in a gun fight that climaxed the Embassy Night Club holdup here.

"I feel remarkably well to be kept in bed, but I suppose it's the best thing to do," the stalwart 6-foot Briton said. His physician said Perkins was improving from the wound in his left thigh.

To scores of friends who visited him today he related, over and over, the story of his injury. He told how he was shot by one of the six bandits who entered the night club, after the man had used Perkins' body as a shield during the battle with policemen.

"I thought for a while that he got away, but I learned after that he was shot by one of the policemen," Perkins said. "He got what was coming to him."

To the golfer a holdup was no novelty. He related today that he had been held up in New York, and repeated that "the best thing to do is just what the bandits tell you."

He said he had no idea how long he would be kept in bed. He regretted his enforced default in yesterday's scheduled final match of the Dixie amateur tournament, but said that even today he probably would not be in condition to give a very good game. Perkins' injury caused officials of the tournament to enter a default in favor of Tommy Goodwin, Monroe, N. Y., the other finalist.

Burke Lands West Coast Open Golf

U. S. Open Champion Wins Tourney by Two Strokes.

Farrell, With 290, Is Second; Sarazen Takes Third.

BELLEAIR, Fla., Feb. 28 (A.P.).—Billy Burke, national open champion, today won the Florida West Coast open gold championship here with a 72-hole score of 288 and collected the first prize of $750. Burke carded a 72 and a 76 on his two 18-hole rounds today to add to his 36-hole total of 140 yesterday.

Johnny Farrell, of St. Augustine, former national open champion, won second money of $500 with a score of 143—75—72—290.

Gene Sarazen, of Great Neck, Long Island, defending champion, who barely qualified yesterday with a 36-hole round of 152, shot brilliant golf today to finish third. He put together two subpar rounds of 69—70 today and won $350 in prize money.

Paul Runyan, of White Plains, N. Y., finished fourth with 143—75—74—292 and received $200.

Babe Ruth Has Complete "Blow-up."

Bill Mehlhorn, New York; Herman Barron, White Plains; Ray Mangrum, Los Angeles, and Densmore Shute, Columbus, Ohio, were tied with 293. Walter Hagen, Detroit, shot a 294, and Joe Kirkwood, Australia, had a 295.

Other leaders were Harry Cooper, Chicago, 144—74—77—295; John Kinder, Caldwell, N. J., 145—73—78—296; Basil Brooks, Bartow, Fla., 151—73—73—297; Wiffy Cox, Brooklyn, N. Y., 143—76—80—299; Dave Hackney, Haverhill, Mass., 151—87—72—300; Henry Cuici, Flushing, Long Island, 152—74—74—300; Willie MacFarlane, Tuckahoe, N. Y., 152—72—76—300.

Babe Ruth, New York Yankees' slugger and leading amateur at the end of 36 holes, had trouble today, completely "blowing up" on the final 18 to card a 95, and Bayard Mitchell, of St. Petersburg, beat him out for the "simon-pure" prize. Ruth had a total of 339 compared with Mitchell's 317.

Golf Medal Play-Off Also Won by Moreland

Houston, Tex., Feb. 28 (A.P.).—Gus Moreland, of Dallas, Tex., won medal honors today in the Houston Country Club's eighteenth annual golf tournament, defeating Willie Maguire, jr., of Houston, in a play-off. They had tied with scores of 144 in qualifying play, which ended yesterday.

Moreland took a 72 today, one over par, and Maguire a 78. The Dallas star went out in 35, one under par, but three-putted two greens coming back. Maguire was in trouble on the third hole, going into the trap for a seven, and at the seventh hole, where he went out of bounds and took a six.

Cordovano to Appear Here on Mat Card

Sam Cordovano, former Georgetown University football player, will appear on the preliminary card to next Monday night's feature rassling bout at Bolling Field, which brings together Karl Pojello and Rudy Laditzi. In a second feature the Bowser boys will present Billy Bartush and Tommy Texis.

Cordavano is a line coach at Columbia University under Lou Little in the football season, but in less seasonal times he follows the profession of bone bending. Matchmaker Goldie Ahearn has mated him with one Dan Winters. Another bout on the Bolling Field bill brings together Charlie Strack, former Olympic wrestling champion, and George Harben, a Southern grappler.

Durham Club Bought By Phillies as Farm

Winter Haven, Fla., Feb. 28 (A.P.). The Philadelphia Nationals have acquired the Durham Club of the Piedmont League as a player farm, Gerry Nugent, Phils' business manager, announced today.

Nugent did not reveal the financial terms, but it was understood the Phillies will give Durham a substantial cash sum, but assume no obligations of the club. In return they will have the pick of the Durham Team and take two men at the end of the season. They may send some of their rookies to the farm.

The pitchers had a good workout today. Manager Bert Shotton stood behind the plate and watched veterans, rookies and hopefuls.

Spring Grid Drills Called at Eastern

Guyon, New Football Coach, Asks Talent to Report Monday.

Spring football practice will open at Eastern High one week from today, when Coach Charlie Guyon, acting for the first time in his new capacity of gridiron mentor of the Lincoln Park schools issues a call for material.

Guyon at the same time will keep an eye on the Eastern baseball nine, whose battery men report for the season on the same day. Dick Lanahan, veteran all-high pitcher, once more will lead the Easterners.

Guyon will have the kind of football material Mike Kelley always dreamed of, when he starts spring operations. Besides an appreciable remnant of last season's team, he will have the services of several former Gonzaga High athletes, notably the Mills twins, Joe and Carl, beautifully mated halfbacks; Francis Cleary and Ed Benjamin, end and lineman on last season's well-knit Gonzaga team.

MEET YEAR TO CLOSE ON SATURDAY

Five Champs Defend College Titles in New York..

NEW YORK, Feb. 28 (A.P.).—The eleventh annual indoor track and field championships of the Intercollegiate Association of Amateur Athletes of America winds up the 1932 indoor track season this week. The scene of Saturday's meet has been shifted to the huge 258th Field Artillery Armory from the old 102d Engineers drill shed. The change not only has made room for another thousand spectators but has made possible a new track—six laps to the mile—which is believed to be the fastest in the world.

Five of the 1931 individual champions and the two winning relay teams are included in the list of 606 entries from 26 colleges and universities.

The mile run stands out on the program. Carl Coan, of Pennsylvania, who set an intercollegiate record of 4:15 1-5 in winning last year, and who has been clocked in 4:13 for the mile, will defend his title against the greatest field of college milers ever assembled.

Many Stars Seek Coan's Scalp.

They are Penrose Hallowell, of Harvard, intercollegiate outdoor champion, and Bill McKniff, of Penn, indoor winner in 1930; Frank Crowley, of Manhattan; Frank Nordell, of New York University; Arthur Martin, Cornell; Bay Estes, Harvard; Hunter P. Dawson, Princeton; James Maloney, New York University, and Frank McKenna, Manhattan.

In the 2-mile run Joe McCluskey, Fordham ace, is out to better the record of 9:17.8 he set last year. He will have a fleet competitor in Clark Chamberlain, of Michigan State, who holds the national and intercollegiate cross country titles and the National Collegiate Athletic Association 2-mile title.

In addition to Coan and McCluskey, the defending champions are Aloysius T. Kelly, of Georgetown, 70-yard dash; Eugene Record, Harvard, 70-yard high hurdles; Bill O'Connor, Columbia, high jump; Pennsylvania in the mile relay, and Boston College in the 2-mile relay.

Real Test on Mat Promised Steele

Worthy Foe Is Provided in Kotsonaros; Other Good Bouts Listed.

Faint rumblings began to be audible yesterday as Matchmaker Joe Turner summoned his weekly ton of rassiers from the corners of wrestledom. The behemoths are due Thursday night at the Washington Auditorium, led by one of the greatest bruisers of them all—Ray Steele.

Tiny Roebuck dominates the semi-windup, which also is a finish bout. The big Haskellite meets another gridman in Frank Spears, a rather surly gentleman from the University of Florida.

Others on the card are Fred Crobmeier and Cy Williams; Doc Wilson and Paul Harper; Benny Ginsberg and George McLeod.

TILDEN DEFEATS GERMAN.

Milwaukee, Wis., Feb. 28 (A.P.).—Big Bill Tilden 2d, of Philadelphia, easily defeated Hans Nusslein, Germany's professional tennis champion, in straight sets, 8—6, 6—4, 6—2, here today

Record Crowd Expected at Coliseum

By BOB CONSIDINE.

FIGHT night . . . streaming crowds . . . milling humanity . . . evening clothes . . . guys with caps . . . Ritchie Coliseum a burst of color on the dark Baltimore highway . . . sleek and slugging fight champions long remembered . . . the thud of the long remembered . . . the hud of the gloves . . . the rasping instructions of managers . . . the bell! . . . here we are at the ringside, ladeez and gentlemen.

Miki Gelb, former bantamweight champion of Hungary; winner of uncountable bouts as a great amateur; conqueror 36 times out of 37 as a professional, is the main attraction of the University of Maryland great gymnasium tonight, where he meets Dick Welsh, bantamweight champion of the South in what promises to be one of the greatest fights ever lined up for local consumption.

Welsh Best of Southern Sector.

Welsh comes to Washington with undisputed domain over the Southern section of the country, and includes in the scalps on his belt that of Billy Landers, slugging Norfolk gob and local favorite.

Gelb's career is as colorful as his boxing. He was discovered in the 1928 Olympics by Jimmy Bronson, Gene Tunney's old trainer. Along with Antol Kocsis, he was brought to the United States in 1930, and opened his American campaign with a startling defeat of Kid Francis, featherweight champion of the world at the time. The only time in two years of busy fighting that Gelb has tasted defeat was on the end of the gloves of Freddy Miller, who boxed Bat Battalino for the featherweight crown in Cincinnati not long ago.

The boys are fast, furious and willing. It is a "natural" in the parlance of the ring.

The greatest card of preliminaries ever to dot a local bill, made up of three eight-round tussles, and a strong four-rounder, has combined with the main event to lure the greatest advance sale in the history of local and nearby fighting. The show already is a financial success, but seats still can be obtained. Every seat in Ritchie Coliseum commands an unbroken view of the ring. Close to 7,000 are expected to jam their ways into the edifice.

Jallos-Burns Promise Action.

A nettling question in local fight bailiwicks will be cleared up in the semiwindup, which mates Lou Jallos and Bobby Burns, bantamweights from Cleveland and Baltimore. Jallos is a former golden gloves champion. The two waged a gory fight at Portner's Arena two weeks ago, and the nod was given to Burns. Long and loud were the complaints and the two have been matched again.

Slugging will be the chief motif in the Vince Forgione-Eric Lawson mix-up in the third eight-rounder. Forgione, a lightheavy who carries the colors of Al Lippe, is expected to have more than his hands full with the tough Lawson kid.

Billy Strickler, one of the greatest punchers ever developed here, and certainly the leading middleweight in recent D. C. ring history, meets some of the stiffest competition he has been called upon to face in Al Trainor, Philadelphia battler.

The show will open with what looks like a stiff bantamweight brawl between Joey Schwartz and Pete Powell.

Drs. George C Havenner, Clogg Heck Marvin, Le Roy Borden, Washington Bicentennial officials; members of Congress, Chief of Police Glassford and a host of greater and lesser celebrities are among the ticket holders. The night will mark a new high in local sport.

All the fighters were in town last night. They will weigh in this afternoon at the Biggs Baths.

WILSON OFF FOR CAMP.

Martinsburg, W. Va., Feb. 28.—Ready and anxious to don the regalia of the Brooklyn Dodgers, Hack Wilson left his home here today by motor for the camp of the Careyites at Clearwater, Fla., and told his home town friends in parting that he was going to "bear down" during the 1932 season. Wilson expects to reach Clearwater tomorrow night.

RED SOX EN ROUTE.

Boston, Feb. 28 (A.P.).—The Boston Red Sox today departed for its new training camp at Savannah, Ga. Manager John Collins headed the party, which included but two players, Justin McLaughlin and Bob Barr, greatest Boston pitching prospects.

A. A. U. TITLE FIVES ANXIOUSLY AWAIT TOURNEY DRAW

D. C. Pairings To Be Made Tonight

BASKET BALL in Washington stands by today, almost with bated breath, while officials of the District A. A. U. make out the ponderous draw for the sixth annual court tournament, which opens tomorrow night at Tech High Gymnasium before a distinguished group of public officials, including Dr. George C. Havenner, executive vice president of the George Washington Bicentennial Commission.

One hundred teams are toeing the mark, ready for the great scramble for seven championships. The unlimited men's division, reflecting the other divisions, is a shambles for any prognostication. At least ten teams have a chance of winning. The same is largely true in the other division.

Players May Have A. A. U. Cards.

District A. A. U. officials yesterday issued a blanket warning to all players who have not yet received their amateur cards to get in immediate touch with the Boys' Club. No one will be allowed to compete without an up-to-date card. Even though cards of some players do not expire until later in the month, they must fill out new applications and receive new cards.

Some idea of the tremendous amount of work involved in the making of a tournament draw may be gleaned from the fact that many of the 100 teams have nights on which they are unable to play. For instance, the Jewish teams can not play either on Friday or Saturday. Bliss Electrical School, one of the favorites in the unlimited division, can not play on many nights because of school study regulations. The D. C. Firemen, evidently anticipating a list of fires, have sent in a list of dates on which it will be impossible for them to play.

Draw to Be Completed Tonight.

The draw will be completed tonight and published in full in tomorrow's Post, the institution which brought the tournament to Washington in 1926, bringing order to the chaos of Washington's basket ball situation.

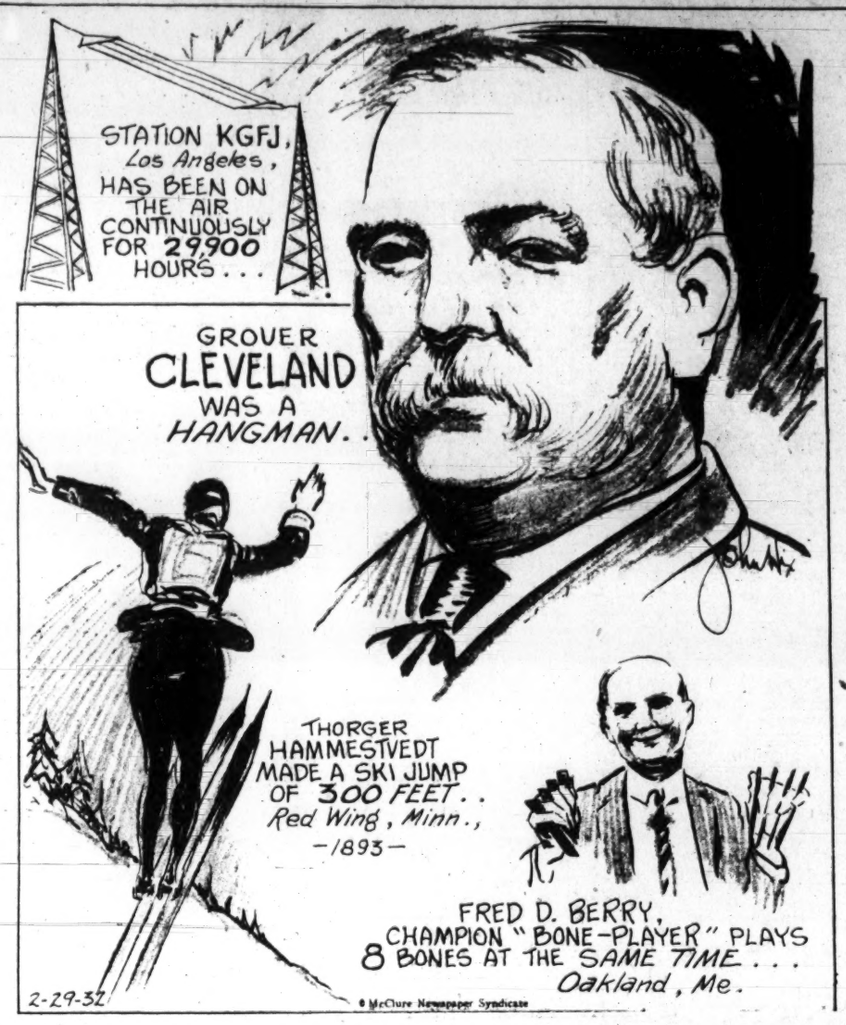
STRANGE AS IT SEEMS —By John Hix



AS sheriff of Erie county, N. Y., Grover Cleveland sprang the trap on two murderers.

Cleveland became sheriff in 1870. In September, 1872, Patrick Morrissey was sentenced to be hanged for having murdered his mother. In those days, it was the duty of the sheriff to execute all persons condemned to death within his jurisdiction. He could have delegated the unpleasant duty to another, but the man who was destined to become President of the United States, would not be guilty of shirking his job.

So Grover Cleveland not only executed Patrick Morrissey, but, he also sprang the trap which hanged John Gaffney the following St. Valentine's Day, 1873, on the same gallows.

—Tropical Park Selections—

By J. B. SNODGRASS

TROPICAL PARK, Miami, Fla., Feb. 28.—The second meeting of the current season at Tropical Park starts its eighteen-day session tomorrow. The Gables Racing Association, which suffered a heavy loss during its first meeting, has an opportunity to recoup some of the losses. With the wholehearted support of the horsemen and the wide confidence of the turf patrons, the association has arranged an interesting book for the thoroughbreds quartered at the track.

Racing Secretary H. D. Munroe was deluged with entries for the opening day's program. No less than 105 names were slipped through the entry box. Two of the events received twenty eligibles, of which fourteen, the limit, may start.

The inaugural program, featured by the Gales Handicap, a test over the 1-mile route, has attracted seven seasoned campaigners. With such stars as LADY BROADCAST, ULUINU, MY DANDY and WATERWAY, a close contest is expected. H. M. Woolf's 6-year-old mare, LADY BROADCAST, which stepped a mile in 1:37 4-5 to score in her last start at Hialeah, is favored to annex the feature. The Hawaiian bred ULUNIU has raced creditably in this class and is the place selection, with WATERWAY, on his best effort, assured of a share in the purse.

FIRST RACE—DEDICATE has the class of the field. ESTIN showed splendid form in his Cuban campaign. PRETTY PENNY has been racing over a distance of ground, but has enough early speed to force the pace.

SECOND RACE—J. O. Keene's DON ROMIRO, which scored easily on the closing program at the other track, may repeat if he starts. NONANA is meeting her own class here and figures to furnish the opposition. HIEOVER needed his last and is a likely improver.

THIRD RACE—SILVER LAKE, a fast-stepping Wise Counsellor colt, is favored. The Ward & Burton color bearer showed his heels to a clever field last outing and has been training well. BACCIOCCO favors this course. In the previous meeting the High Time gelding accounted for three sprints. CLAREMONT and ELLICE rate a money chance.

FIFTH RACE—BROOKSIE has the speed of her nine opponents. She will have PRINCESS ZELDA to beat for the honors. The latter has reached her best form and must be accorded a chance. POLYGAMOUS is the show choice.

SIXTH RACE—Following his two seconds in successive starts, STELLANOVA rates the call. TIGER PRINCE and MOROCCO are closely rated and should finish in that order for the remainder of the purse.

SEVENTH RACE—ELEANORA M. showed plenty of speed in her Havana races, and, with several sparkling trials, the United Verde filly is given the call. MUFF, a slow breaker, is nicely suited by the conditions and, with an energetic rider in the saddle, may prove a dangerous contender. WORKLESS appears best of the others for the minor award.

VIC TOSSERS WIN FROM FRENCH

Morris, Farrell Are Stars in 34 to 25 Court Win.

By LEWIS F. ATCHISON.

A THOROUGHLY chastised and penitent Vic's Sport Shop Team plunged back into the swim for the semipro championship of this vicinity by winning over French's A. C., 34 to 25, in a fast game played at Silver Spring yesterday. It was Vic's second win in three series games, and French's second loss in two starts.

Freddy Mesmer, Georgetown University coach, started at guard for French's and the fans expected big things of him, but Dave Keppell, Vic's coach, assigned Walter Morris, a former teammate of Mesmer, to guard the half-pint. Morris took a great interest in his charge; in fact, a little too much interest to suit Referee Nate Sauber, and he was led shamefacedly off the court in the third period, a victim of the four fouls rule. Morris played a whale of a game yesterday. He directed his team's attack while in the fray, in addition to holding Mr. Mesmer scoreless during that time.

Franches Lead at End Of First Quarter.

While Morris was acting as engineer for the Sport Shop express, "Tubba" Farrell was playing the all-important part of firemen. "Tubba" kept the steam at maximum pressure with his unerring and numerous shots. He led both teams in scoring, with 14 points.

French's led, 6 to 5, at the end of the first quarter, but slipped a bit in the second, trailing 12 to 7 at one stage. Ed Colliflower injected new life into the fray with a trio of field goals, bringing the team to within two points of the leaders and Brenner knotted the count with a shot from close in just as the whistle blew ending the half.

Play was slow as hostilities were resumed in the second half. Vic's assumed a one-point lead on a foul shot by Farrell and was never headed, although French's always remained within striking distance. The eventual winners opened up in the final period and stretched their advantage to 11 points, leading 32 to 21 at one time. Colliflower and Buddy Zimmerman narrowed the margin separating the teams considerably with their fine shooting, but the game could not be salvaged.

In a preliminary game the Palace A. C. defeated the Boys Club Five, 14 to 13.

FOUR GAMES FOR SCHOOL TOSSERS

St. John's and G. U. Prep Play Series Game Today.

THE fast-ebbing scholastic basket ball season looks to the private schools for succor in prolonging its stay on the sports calendar this week, and with no small measure of success. Four games in all are scheduled.

St. John's, newly crowned champion of prep schools, engages an old foe today when Georgetown Prep invades the Vermont avenue gym for a tussle with the Cadets, starting at 3:30 p. m. It will be the deciding game of a three-game series between the two. The St. John's has built up a winning streak of thirteen games, but it will have its hands full in adding No. 14 to the list.

St. John's Busy Tomorrow, Too.

The Christian Brothers' boys also hold the spotlight tomorrow night, meeting Calvert Hall, scholastic champions of Baltimore, at St. John's, at 8:15. The two have been meeting annually on the court for the past several years and the Baltimoreans have an edge in the series. Last year they eked out a one-point victory after the Johnnies apparently had won the verdict. The game should be a scorcher.

Gonzaga swings into action Wednesday, opposing Georgetown Prep at Garrett Park. This is also the "rubber" game of the series between the two. The Purple concludes its season Friday night, playing St. John's on the latter's court.

Eastern and Central, the only public high schools still playing, will probably be entered in the Washington and Lee tournament which begins Thursday. Eastern is already entered in the games, but Central authorities are still debating the advisability of sending the team.

The only other public schools team to see action this week is Central's swimming team, which meets Baltimore Poly here tomorrow and competes in the South Atlantic A. A. U. championships in Baltimore Saturday.

around town were the scene of most to the day's activities.

The most prominent golfer of the team, Babe Ruth, is scheduled to step out on the ball field tomorrow, when the entire Yankee squad is due to report. Although Ruth has not signed a contract yet, he is expected to take regular workouts with the team.

Clearwater, Fla., Feb. 28 (A.P.).—Joe Shaute, who has been ranked as one of Brooklyn's holdouts, arrived in the Dodgers' training camp today and promptly came to terms with the management. Another recent arrival, Walley Gilbert, remained firm in his refusal to sign the contract offered him.

Along with Shaute, Jackie Warner and Max Rosenfeld came to town and most of the others who are slated to report with the second division of players are expected by tomorrow.

Paso Robles, Calif., Feb. 28 (A.P.). Manager George Gibson, of the Pittsburgh Pirates, is having difficulty in preventing his charges from becoming too enthusiastic and working too hard.

With typical youthful enthusiasm, the Corsairs are showing a fine brand of fire and dash. "Gibby" has had to caution them several times to take their training in smaller doses and round into shape more slowly.

The Pirate pilot, who came here with the first contingent of Bucs, has been fortunate in keeping the injury bugaboo out of his camp. The squad flashed zippy form today, with not even a "Charley horse" in evidence.

D. C. COLLEGE BOXERS IN 3 MEETS

C. U. at Baltimore Tonight; Columbus Busy Saturday.

CATHOLIC UNIVERSITY'S boxing team will be striving for its third victory of the season when it squares off with Loyola College tonight at 8 o'clock at the Evergreen in Baltimore. The match is next to the last for the Cardinals, who will conclude their season Saturday night in a match with Temple University at Brookland.

All eyes will be glued on Danny Pyne, Catholic ace, who may taste of defeat for the first time this season when he encounters Tony Maraglia, slugging Loyola mittman. Maraglia also boasts an unblemished record and is said to be one of the cleverest collegiate boxers in the East. The following men will don the gloves for the locals tonight: Miro, 115 pounds; Generoco, 125 pounds; Thididieau, 135 pounds; Stein, 145 pounds; Stapleton, 155 pounds; Pyne, 165 pounds; Gharrity, 175 pounds, and "Bingo" Flynn, heavyweight.

Columbus Boxers Meet Brooklyn.

The remainder of the week will be quiet for the college athletes. Columbus is the only school, other than C. U., schedule for intercollegiate competition. It will ring down the curtain on its boxing season in a match with Brooklyn College Saturday night at the Strand Theater. The other schools will be busy with their preparations along other lines of endeavor.

The Georgetown and Catholic University track teams will stage their first outdoor drills about Wednesday, and the latter, along with George Washington, will call out candidates for the football team for spring practice today. Georgetown's baseball squad will hold its initial workout under the critical eye of Coach Clayton Sheedy today at the Hilltop. Maryland's lacrosse and track teams will be busy.

Company F Quintet Downs Service Foe

In its final game preparatory to entering the A. A. U. tournament, Company F defeated Company M, of Annapolis, 33 to 26, in an exciting game played at Hyattsville yesterday. Both companies are attached to the First Regiment, Maryland National Guard. Company F ran wild in the first half, scoring 26 points, while holding its opponent to 1, but Company M rallied in the second period, outscoring its host by 18 points. It was unable to overcome the lead of its opponents, however. In a preliminary game the Company F Reserves defeated the Maryland Aces, 16 to 11.

Intramural Sports Thrive at Maryland

Special to The Washington Post.

College Park, Md., Feb. 28.—Competition in three branches of intramural basket ball is now in full swing at the University of Maryland, the most ambitious program ever undertaken by the Old Line institution.

An interfraternity series, a R. O. T. C. tournament and a general intramural tournament make up the athletic card. Winners in the various groups will meet in a round-robin for the school title.

The interfraternity competition is divided into two sections, with Kappa Alpha leading in the first and Theta Chi in the second, each with two wins in as many starts. Play will be concluded next week with the section winners clashing in the series of three games.

The military tournament has reached the interbattalion stage, with Company A having eliminated Company B in the only match in this round. It is planned to finish competition next week.

In the general intramural tourney Whirlwinds, Howitzers, Hawks, Aces and Gangsters have reached the second round. Play also is to be concluded next week.

SKINKER FIVE TROUNCES GIANTS

Evans and Nee Star as Howitzers Bow by 48-27 Count.

THE Skinker Eagles continued their triumphant march through the ranks of the local semipro teams at Bolling Field last night, sending the Howitzer Giants down to defeat before its powerful attack by a score of 48-27. It was the third victory of the championship series for the winners, who have now defeated every claimant for their title.

With "Moon" Evans and Pete Nee leading the attack, the Skinkers set about ridding themselves of the invaders in the first period. They romped through the opposition with little or no trouble and led at the half by a large score.

Giants Spurt Short.

The Giants made a futile bid for victory with a spurt in the third quarter, but Julie Radice, potting them from all angles for the champions, nullified this effort.

The Eagles will oppose Vic's Sport Shop next Sunday in the second game of their series at Silver Spring.

WHILE the major league clubs are in Florida, California and other garden spots, preparing for the long summer's struggle for pennants, those who remain at home are working up a bit of diamond enthusiasm. This photo may help although the players who made up the team shown here are now "just spectators" and are resting the muscles which propelled them around the bases and after hard hit liners in the days away back in 1908. Those in the back row, left to right, are Mooch Fenton, Johan Kondrup, manager; Howard Bacon, captain; Red Waller, Beckstine, Michaels, Pennington, Sprigman, Ryan and Collie Waller. Front row, Norman Kraft, Mofft Bradley, Callahan, Orrison, McGrath and Barnes. Campbell, the mascot, is seated in front of the group.

RIFLE FIRE BRINGS DOWN RUMRUNNER CAR IN 16TH STREET

Tires Are Shot Away and Gas Tank Riddled in Thrilling Chase.

SMOKE SCREEN ALLOWS OCCUPANTS TO ESCAPE

Montgomery Police Seize Abandoned Auto and Liquor Cargo.

Firing accurately through a dense smoke screen laid down by a speeding rum-laden automobile, a Montgomery County policeman early yesterday morning disabled the car after a 14-mile-nip-and-tuck chase which extended from Ashton, Md., through Silver Spring and into the fashionable area of upper Sixteenth street.

The rum car, two tires shot away and its gas tank riddled by bullets from the rifle of Policeman Lawrence Dixon, was abandoned at the Manchester lane entrance to Sixteenth street, while the two occupants, both colored, escaped under cover of their smoke screen.

Pistol Menace Ignored.

Policeman Dixon, joined in the chase by Lieut. Frank Varney, of the Second Precinct, confiscated 160 gallons of liquor and the automobile.

The action began near Ashton, Md., when Dixon, on patrol duty, noticed a large sedan running without rear light and at a high rate of speed. He gave chase and drawing alongside the rum car, ordered it to stop, threatening the occupants with his pistol.

Receiving only a guffaw in reply, Dixon and his driver dropped behind the liquor-laden machine and the former began to fire at the car with his rifle. His first shot tore away one tire but the rum car continued on its way, albeit with reduced speed.

Second Tire Shot Away.

Dixon then emptied his pistol at the car in front, riddling the gas tank, while another shot from his rifle took away a second tire. This combination, and the fact that the gas tank was rapidly being drained through bullet holes, led the pursued pair to abandon ship. A last blast of smoke was sufficient to allow the suspects to reach safety in the nearby underbrush.

Lieut. Varney joined the chase just inside the District line, while a dozen other cars, attracted by Dixon's running fire on the suspected machine, followed the two police cars.

While police were searching the neighborhood for the culprits, one of the spectators tried to make away with a half-gallon jar from the confiscated machine. An alert patrolman discovered the act in time to save the half gallon, but there was no arrest.

Dixon in Previous Chase.

On Saturday morning Dixon figured in a similar chase which had its termination near the end of yesterday's pursuit. He picked up a rum car at Wheaton on the Brookeville road and raced after it through intermittent smoke screens to the District line.

As the District was neared, the chase went through heavy traffic and as the pursued machine crossed the boundary line it slowed up. Dixon did not follow over the line. The car passed through Maple avenue and at Sixteenth street halted and its two occupants fled.

Sixth Precinct police were notified and found eleven cases of whisky and a large smoke-screen device in the car. Search was begun for the men.

WOMAN FOUND SHOT BY PISTOL IN HOME

Husband, Hearing Reports, Finds Mrs. Stefanel Badly Wounded.

A bullet which entered her chest just above the heart and found its exit in the small of her back may cost the life of Mrs. Elton Stefanel, 33 years old, who was found critically wounded last night lying on a bed in a second-floor room of her home, 935 Second street southwest. Police say the wound was self-inflicted.

The woman's husband, Paul Stefanel, proprietor of a shoe repairing shop over which the family lived, was in the kitchen of their home when he heard the shot. Three more reports, fired in rapid succession, followed as he rushed to his wife's room. He reached Mrs. Stefanel's side, only to find her lying semiconscious across a bed. A smoking revolver was clutched in her hand.

Mrs. Stefanel, the mother of a 15-year-old son, was taken to Emergency Hospital, where it was found one bullet pierced her body near the heart and came out the middle of her back. Although Mr. Stefanel said four shots were fired before he could reach the second floor, police were unable to find traces of the other three.

En route to the hospital Mrs. Stefanel is alleged to have told police that she was "tired of living." Her husband declared she had not been in ill health and had never appeared despondent. Their son, Paul, jr., was not at home when his mother was found.

3 CABMEN ROBBED OF CASH AND TAXIS

All of Holdupmen Escape After Series of Thefts; Search Started.

Three taxicab drivers were held up and robbed of sums of money and their machines early yesterday.

Harry H. Ferro, 629 C street southwest, told police he picked up a colored man at Four-and-a-half street and Maryland avenue southwest, who told him to drive to Hoover Airport. Ferro said the man forced him to stop underneath the Alexandria viaduct and at the point of a gun took $13 and the cab.

George Carter, colored hacker, 705 Fairmont street northwest, said three white men hired him about 4 o'clock yesterday morning at Fourteenth and K streets northwest and directed him to drive to Georgetown. At Forty-fourth street and Foxhall road, two of the men drew revolvers, he said, and forced him into the rear seat.

The third man, Carter said, took the wheel and drove to Great Falls, Va. There they took $11 from him and drove away in the cab. He furnished a description of them to police.

Melvin A. Barker, colored hacker, said a lone white man hailed him at Thirteenth street and Logan Circle northwest and told him to drive to Sixteenth and Gallatin streets northwest. There the man at pistol point took $7.75 and the cab.

Henry O. Skinner Is Killed in Indiana Truck-Auto Accident.

Police last night were attempting to locate relatives or friends of Henry O. Skinner, of this city, who was killed yesterday when the automobile in which he was riding crashed into a parked truck near Greenfield, Ind.

Skinner, who was believed to have been hitch-hiking his way along the highway, was riding in the machine of Harold Bray, of Indianapolis, Ind. Bray was critically injured. Their car struck a truck stalled in the center of the road. The driver of the truck said two flat tires prevented his moving the vehicle.

Skinner was identified by discharge papers from the United States Army issued at Kelly Field, Tex., several weeks ago. The truck driver was arrested for failure to show a driver's license.

Child Swallows Poison; Is Treated at Hospital

Even though Rita Kennedy is but 21 months old she has already developed an intense distaste for all brown colored fluids.

The reason is this. Yesterday Rita saw a small bottle and decided to sample it. To her regret, she did. Next came a trip to Georgetown University Hospital, where Rita was treated for taking a small dose of poison. While her parents were not looking she had tried it and found it not to her liking. After treatment she was taken to her home at 3929 Military road northwest.

Group Favors Classes On Sight Conservation

Vigorous support of the movement to obtain sight conservation classes for the Washington Public Schools has been pledged by the Health Committee of the Council of Social Agencies, of which Miss Gertrude H. Bowling is chairman. The health committee has indorsed efforts of the Lions Club to obtain passage of legislation providing for such schools, unanimously adopting a resolution to this effect, presented by Mrs. May B. Vories, chairman of the subcommittee on sight conservation, at a recent meeting.

The health committee, it was pointed out, works actively throughout the year for the improvement of general health conditions in the District and takes an active interest in all measures relating to health. Interest in sight conservation was brought about by discovery that Washington and Pittsburgh, of the twenty largest cities in the United States, are the only cities having no such classes.

Man of 69, Gassed While Asleep, Dies

Sister-in-Law Discovers the Victim Unconscious; Efforts Fail.

John Albert Andrews, 69, of 1068 Jefferson street northwest, died in Gallinger Hospital yesterday afternoon as the result of inhaling illuminating gas while asleep in a bedroom of his home a few hours before. A certificate of accidental death was issued by Coroner Joseph D. Rogers.

Mrs. Annie Scrivener, of 1210 Thirtieth street northwest, sister-in-law of Andrews, found him unconscious shortly after 3 o'clock in the afternoon. Gas was leaking from a heater in the room as the result of a defective fixture.

Fire rescue apparatus was summoned and Andrews was treated with oxygen. He was removed to Gallinger Hospital, where he died about 4:30 p. m.

Desire for Peace Held Highest Duty

Dr. Cartwright Holds Its University Achieves Step Forward.

The highest duty of the peoples of the earth, which was once to work for the victory of a country in time of war, has now turned toward a universal desire for world peace, and the very presence in the world of this hitherto unknown desire, let alone its realization, is a decided step achieved, Dr. John Keating Cartwright, professor of church history at the Sulpician Seminary, Catholic University, and assistant rector of St. Patrick's Church, declared yesterday afternoon in the last of a series of sermons on the Washington Catholic Radio Hour.

Admitting that it is not the part of the pulpit to enter into the political side of international disarmament problems, Dr. Cartwright pointed out that basic to all these problems "and more necessary than all of them is the will to peace which is the duty of all Christian peoples and which must be had if war is to be abolished."

To make a unified brotherhood of mankind has been the dream of all Christian ages, Dr. Cartwright said, and at the present time it is held out as an objective of the prayers and aspirations of Christians, he added. Dr. Cartwright is a noted authority on church history and has been a professor of that subject at Sulpician Seminary, Catholic University, for the last eight years. He is assistant rector of St. Patrick's Church. His concluding sermon was broadcast from the Church of the Immaculate Conception through Station WOL.

District Jail Prisoner Flees in Hospital Car

A District Jail prisoner, working on the grounds adjacent to Gallinger Hospital, yesterday saw the wide world waiting and while a guard's attention was diverted, leaped into a light truck used at the municipal hospital, and sped away.

The man, Willson W. Ernest, who was serving a 10-day sentence for intoxication, and the truck—emblazoned on both sides with "Gallinger Hospital" in red paint—were being sought last night by police. At a late hour the truant prisoner and the truck had not been located.

BILL LOWERING AGE LIMIT FOR CHILDREN OF STAGE DEFENDED

Equity Backs Legislation to Be Considered Today by School Board.

WOULD PERMIT GIRLS UNDER 18 AND BOYS 16

Many Reasons Advanced for Changing Restrictions of District's Law.

A meeting of the legislative committee of the Board of Education of the District of Columbia has been called by Chairman Henry Gilligan for 3 o'clock this afternoon to consider the Capper-Norton bill, which seeks to amend the District child labor law to permit the appearance in local theaters of girls under 18 years of age and boys under 16 with regularly touring theatrical companies as late as 11 p. m.

A hearing on the House bill, introduced by Representative Mary Norton, of New Jersey, chairman of the House District committee, is scheduled for Friday morning of this week at 10:30.

Opponents of the proposed legislation, which it is believed by those familiar with all aspects of the situation that now exists in the local theater as a result of the restrictive statutes now in force will be salutary for all concerned, have raised the question as to whether the demand for the amendment springs from the needs of the stage itself or merely from the avarice of local box offices.

Equity's Answer to Question.

This question is answered by the following letter received by S. E. Cochran, advocate of the pending bills, from the Actors Equity Association, an affiliation of the American Federation of Labor:

"Let us assure you that the Actor's Equity Association is deeply interested in the matter you bring to our attention. We, as an organization, do not favor hampering legitimate producers any more than can be helped. If children are banished from the stage, many of the classics, in their entirety, can never be presented in this country. We have only to mention King John, Richard the Third, and several others of Shakespeare's works, to say nothing of modern plays. If children are not allowed to appear on the stage dramatic authors will be circumscribed to a certain extent, since some problems require the employment of a child. Then, too, there should be considered the child, in the movies, the gifted child instrumentalist, &c. Of course we feel that every possible safeguard should be thrown around stage children."

The Actors Equity Association, it is pointed out, is representative exclusively of the stage and its people and does not include in its membership managers or owners of theaters. It does, however, represent the viewpoint of such leaders of the contemporary stage as E. H. Sothern, George Arliss, Florence Reed, Francis Wilson, president emeritus; Beulah Bondi, Eddie Cantor, himself the father of five daughters; Jane Cowl, Katharine Cornell, Sir Guy Standing, Lucille Webster Gleason, mother of a son who is also an actor and began as a minor; Madge Kennedy, George Fawcett, John Emerson and scores more of the leaders of their profession.

Local Conditions Argued.

It is further argued, in refutation of claims that early training is not essential to success upon the stage, that while all child players do not attain subsequent greatness, neither do all children graduated from the public schools. It might as well be contended that a singer, a pianist, a portrait painter, a novelist or a playwright would be as thoroughly grounded in his art beginning at 16 or 18 years of age as if he had begun its practice ten years earlier, according to the viewpoint of those who feel that the present law is unjustly restrictive.

A fundamental consideration also, in any contemplation of the proposed legislation, it is argued by its proponents, is that since it is a loocal law it be appraised from the standpoint of local, rather than national, conditions in the theater. Many arguments, it is said, are being leveled against the Capper-Norton bill that are not relevant because they are predicated upon conditions existing elsewhere in the country—if at all—but not here. There is said not to be a local management that does not invite the most rigid investigation of its backstage conditions.

Furthermore, there is evidence available that in the 17 States where restrictive child legislation is in force with regard to the theater, and the people have the vote and therefore the power of political pressure, both the spirit and letter of the law is largely ignored or effectively nullified. That is a condition that could not exist in Washington, either under the present or the proposed law, since the enforcing agency under the terms of the pending bills is the Board of Education of the District.

Many Indorse Measure.

Still another aspect of the problem is raised by the advocates of the amendment. A majority of stage children appear in the same companies with either one or both of their parents. If the child is prohibited from appearing upon the stage, what is the likelihood of his being properly safeguarded during the evening hours when his parents are engaged in their profession, and he is left to shift for himself? Or, if he is kept in the theater, why not preclude a natural penchant for mischief by permitting him to be usefully, educationally and profitably occupied? The studying of stage parts and the acceptance of stage direction are in themselves valuable mental drills.

In addition to the Actors' Equity Association, the Capper-Norton bill has the endorsement of:

The Rev. Francis J. Hurney, the American Federation of Labor, the Central Labor Union of the District of Columbia, Frank J. Hogan, president of the District of Columbia Bar Association; the Northeast Citizens Association, the Stage Hands Union, the Musicians Protective Union, Senator Henry Ashurst, of Arizona; Representative William Sirovich, of New York; Representative Emanuel Celler, of New York; the Rev. James Shera Montgomery, chaplain of the House of Representatives; the Washington Board of Trade, and the Merchants and Manufacturers Association.

N'Gi, Zoo Gorilla, Gaining In Battle Against Death

Is Expected to Be Well Again in Few Weeks; Many Anxious.

The little 6-year-old gorilla lay quietly on the floor of his specially constructed oxygen cage yesterday as hundreds of children and grown-ups crowded the doorways of the lion house in an endeavor to see or inquire of their favorite anthropoid.

Breathing the life-giving oxygen day and night since Friday has improved the beast's condition to such an extent that yesterday he sat up and voluntarily drank two cups of water, the first he has taken by himself since he has been ill. Dr. David E. Buckingham, the zoo veterinarian, said yesterday that they have every hope of saving N'Gi's life, and, though he is still depressed, he seems to be getting over it and is beginning to take more interest in his surroundings.

Yesterday he ate a pear, part of an apple, two bananas and a tomato. Dr. John Eckhardt, child health specialist, is still in daily attendance and consultations with Dr. Buckingham.

Fifteen tanks of oxygen have already been used in the chamber that was rushed here from New York.

When Paul Holdup, who has been N'Gi's keeper since he was brought here from Africa a little over two years ago, entered the cage yesterday, the baby gorilla tugged playfully at his coat and then affectionately threw a hairy arm around his neck. Holdup holds him in his arms at least twice a day to relieve him from the reclining position.

Dr. Buckingham said N'Gi never likes to be alone and is one of the friendliest animals he has ever known. He likes everyone and is happy when he is showing this.

It is expected that he will be kept in the oxygen chamber for at least a week yet and it will be several weeks before he will be again his old happy, playful self.

Letters and telephone calls are still pouring into the office and the home of Dr. William M. Mann, Zoo director. Some of them are inquiries and suggestions and others are denunciations of the money being spent on an animal when so many humans need medical attention.

Reptile House Visited By 2,500,000 in Year

The reptile house at the Zoo was one year old last night and Dr. William M. Mann, director of the Zoo, while anxiously watching the doctors attend N'Gi, the sick gorilla, yesterday related how one of his dreams was realized when the house was opened a year ago.

Dr. Mann estimated that two and one-half million persons have passed through the reptile house during its first year of existence.

Washington can well be proud of this home for reptiles as it is the finest and largest one in the world. It cost $125,000 and its only competitor is a similar house located at Amsterdam, Holland, which lacks certain features that are included in the Capital house. Every cage has been minutely reproduced from the native haunts of the reptiles and where it was impossible to reproduce all the jungle plants and scenery they were painted on the three sides of the glass-inclosed cages, so that each reptile feels entirely at home.

Many scientists and zoological experts from all over the country attended the opening. Dr. Mann and Mrs. Mann, with members of the Zoo staff, acted as hosts to a crowd of approximately 1,500 guests.

GLARING HEADLIGHTS CAUSE AUTO UPSET

3 Injured, 1 Seriously, as Car Leaves Rockville Pike; Bystander Also Hurt.

Blinding headlights indirectly caused injuries to three men, one of whom is believed to be seriously hurt, when an automobile left the road and overturned early yesterday on the Rockville pike, 2 miles north of Bethesda.

Those injured are Roland Stottlemyer, 22 years old, possible fractures of the skull and back; Lloyd Riffit, 17 years old, of 1314 Four-and-a-half street southwest, severe lacerations of the scalp, and Richard Myers, 16 years old, of the Chastleton Hotel, slight cuts on the head.

After stopping to view the accident, Vera Dozor, of 5109 Georgia avenue northwest, a hostess at the Club Lido, received possible internal injuries when her automobile was struck by a car driven by Alfred Dedge, of Frederick, Md. She refused to go to a hospital.

The automobile, operated by Myers, was headed for Washington when the driver's vision was blinded by glaring headlights. He switched to the side of the road and the car left the pavement and overturned.

The injured were brought to Georgetown University Hospital by Austin Donelan, of 1728 K street northwest. Lindon Stottlemyer, 18 years old, a brother of Roland, was uninjured. Both live at the Chastleton Hotel. Roland Stottlemyer was detained at the hospital.

Vera Dozor was on her way home when she stopped at the accident. She was taken to her home by Patrolman Webb Hersperger and was given treatment by a private physician.

First aid was rendered at the bureau dispensary. Mr. Covington was then removed to Providence Hospital for further treatment and sent home.

HELP FELLOW MAN, PLEA OF DR. SIZOO

Minister Declares Glory of Christian Faith Lies in Aiding Others.

"All the people of this age who fight against closed doors are not in prisons," said Dr. Joseph R. Sizoo, preaching yesterday morning at the New York Avenue Presbyterian Church.

Dr. Sizoo's topic was "The Doorkeeper," his text being drawn from the eighth verse of the third chapter of the book of Revelations.

He said:

"As one looks out on life today the first impression that inevitably comes is the number of people who live behind closed doors. This may be a large world, but for the most part, men occupy a small and confining part. We live our lives in shut-in areas.

"A man enters business and he may make a success of it, but it is a very narrow and provincial world in which he lives. He can't break through the doors of large opportunities.

No Finer Contribution.

"There is no finer contribution that any one can make to mankind than to help open these doors. Centuries ago an old world poet wrote, 'I had rather be a doorkeeper.'

"Strange enough he is the only man remembered of that age. Nobody knows who was the biggest banker, the most important realtor or the owner of the biggest string of race horses. But this man is remembered because he was a doorkeeper lifting before the people of his time large vistas and higher ideals of life.

"What makes life great is not that you have money or degrees or social standing, but that you have given to someone somewhere a finer nobler outlook on life.

Forever Opening Doors.

"That is the glory of the Christian faith. Whatever men may say about Jesus of Nazareth one thing is sure, that he was forever opening doors to men.

"Religion essentially is not submission or renunciation. It does not command asceticism or monastic life. The Christian faith is always outbound, pushes back foothills and opens to people a finer, nobler way of living.

"Religion may not free a man from problems, may not abolish pains, may not insure him against all risks, but it will give him an open door to the wonder of life and to the unfaltering presence of an unfailing God."

HOOVER FELICITATES BAPTIST CHURCH ON 130TH ANNIVERSARY

CALVARY PASTOR AVERS WORLD DESPERATELY ILL

President Hoover sent his greetings to the First Baptist Church yesterday in connection with the observance of its 130th anniversary celebration. The message from the President was read by Walter H. Newton, one of his secretaries, who in a brief address of felicitation spoke of his influence of Baptist leaders in the Nation since the founding of the republic. The letter from President Hoover follows:

"I send my most hearty felicitations to the congregation of the First Baptist Church of Washington, D. C., upon the celebration of the 130th anniversary of its foundation. A tradition that extends back to the administration of President Thomas Jefferson, and a church that has steadily grown in numbers and influence, expanding through new congregations spreading throughout the growing city, has earned a place of lasting affection and influence which I gladly recognize and warmly admire."

The service yesterday was a special assembly of the Columbia Association of Baptist Churches, presided over by W. W. Everett, moderator, with the roll call of the churches by Dr. H. W. O. Millington, executive secretary of the association.

The Cure Lies With Church.

Rev. W. S. Abernethy, D. D., pastor of the Calvary Baptist Church, who delivered the sermon on "The Church and This Ailing World," declared that the world today is distressingly sick, economically, morally, spiritually. The cure for its ailments, he asserted, is to be found in the Christian Churches which, in the words of Christ, are to be the "salt of the world," the curative, preservative agency. At the morning services, the Rev. Samuel Judson Porter, D. D., pastor of the church, spoke of "The Religious Undertone in the Life of George Washington."

Dr. Abernethy said, in part:

"In the Far East we see as ruthless a piece of treaty violation as any nation was ever guilty of. The war prophets freely predict another terrific conflagration in the not distant future. Economically, of course, the world is desperately ill, though our own Nation is probably less affected than others. Morally, the situation is equally bad.

"What the Seabury investigations are revealing in New York City can be duplicated probably, though in lesser degree, in any city in the country. The world is sick, desperately sick. Other civilizations have gone down; will ours go the same way? Are we to follow Babylon, Egypt, Greece, Rome? Have we come to our zenith and are we now on the downgrade? We do not know. All we can say is that unless some things are changed radically our present civilization will go the way that others have gone.

Censures Radicals.

"Let it go, says the radical. Let existing systems and institutions go. Tear down the fabric of human society and build anew. It is the only way.

"We shall muddle through somehow; things are really not so bad as painted, says the shallow optimist. Don't listen to those who paint dark pictures. They are alarmists. God's in His heaven. All's right with the world.

"It's none of my business how things are going. I had nothing to do with it. I am not to blame, neither can I help right things. Thus speaks the complacent, easy-going man, who is never concerned until he himself begins to be touched by distorted conditions.

"Salt of the Earth."

"But Jesus had a remedy. 'Ye are the salt of the earth.' He was speaking to men who a little later would form the beginning of His church. As salt is nature's preservative, so you are my hope of saving society from the ills that threaten its very existence.

"Shall the church complacently leave to others the settlement of the most pressing and insistent problem before us today—the liquor question? With human lives blighted and human happiness ruined and human souls damned through this iniquitous traffic, are we to say: 'Our business is with the souls of men. We leave such matters to the politicians to settle.' The church did lend a hand four years ago and as sure as there is a God in heaven it will do so again, should either party attempt to put a wet in the White House.

"With war threatening to engulf the world again, shall the church say, 'This is not our business. Our task is with human souls.' With suffering, handicapped, underprivileged human beings about us, dare we say 'Our concern is with souls and not with bodies, with the future and not with the present.'

Special Assembly.

"Jesus' remedy for the ills of society is to counteract evil influences with that best of all preservative elements, the salt of His gospel applied through transformed human beings. No church can in these days when the world is desperately ill, concern itself only with saving souls. It must do that but it must do more. It must be salt to save society from putrefaction." Dr. Abernethy concluded.

At the continuation of the 130th anniversary services next Sunday, Rufus W. Weaver, LL. D., will speak in the morning on "The First Baptist Church as a Center of National Denominational Life," revealing much new material bearing upon the life of the church discovered as a result of extensive research. In the afternoon there will be a special assembly and the General Baptist Convention of the District of Columbia, with a roll call of the 86 colored Baptist churches in the city.

Capital Man Finds George V Is Solely British Philatelist

The erroneous notion held by many philatelists that King George V of England is interested in stamps of all countries has been exploded by Dr. Walter F. Shenton, of 3603 Porter street, who is professor of mathematics at American University.

An enthusiastic philatelist himself, Dr. Shenton fixed up a "cover," an envelope with a full set of twelve of the new Washington Bicentennial stamps, and addressed it to King George of England. The special stamps were canceled with care.

"I have learned," wrote Dr. Shenton, "that you are an enthusiastic philatelist and could not refrain from offering this first-day cover as a token of my esteem."

In reply, Dr. Shenton heard from London in a letter bearing the scarlet coronet and headed "Buckingham Palace," as follows: "The private secretary is commanded to thank Mr. Walter F. Shenton for his letter of the first instant, but to inform him that the king only includes stamps of the British empire in his majesty's collection."

Truant Lads, Headed West, Taken From Freight Train

Two stoical adventurers—a lad of 13 and another of 12—were plucked from their perches on the grab-irons of a freight car attached to a Pennsylvania Railroad train, and admitted to their captors, two railroad detectives, that they were bound for the sunny shores of the Pacific.

The boys—Francis Bozzi, 12, and Franklin Pierce, 13, it developed, had escaped Saturday from the Industrial Home School. They had boarded the train somewhere near Benning, D. C., as it was en route here from Baltimore.

A bag of walnuts—the source of which they would not reveal—constituted the commissary and capital of the two trekkers. To insure their not being thrown from the train by lurches, they had slipped their belts around the grab-iron and then buckled them to their waists.
